DEDICATED to
The Spirit of Unity in Men

rising far o'er the haste and press of life

We, the editors of the 1947 Hi-O-Hi, dedicate this book to the spirit of unity in men, and to its expression at Oberlin College. We find its most immediate manifestation here in the spirit that calls us to weekly vespers and chapel services, to a brief pause in the "Learning and Labor," to a restful moment in which we can reorient ourselves to the world in which we must find our place.

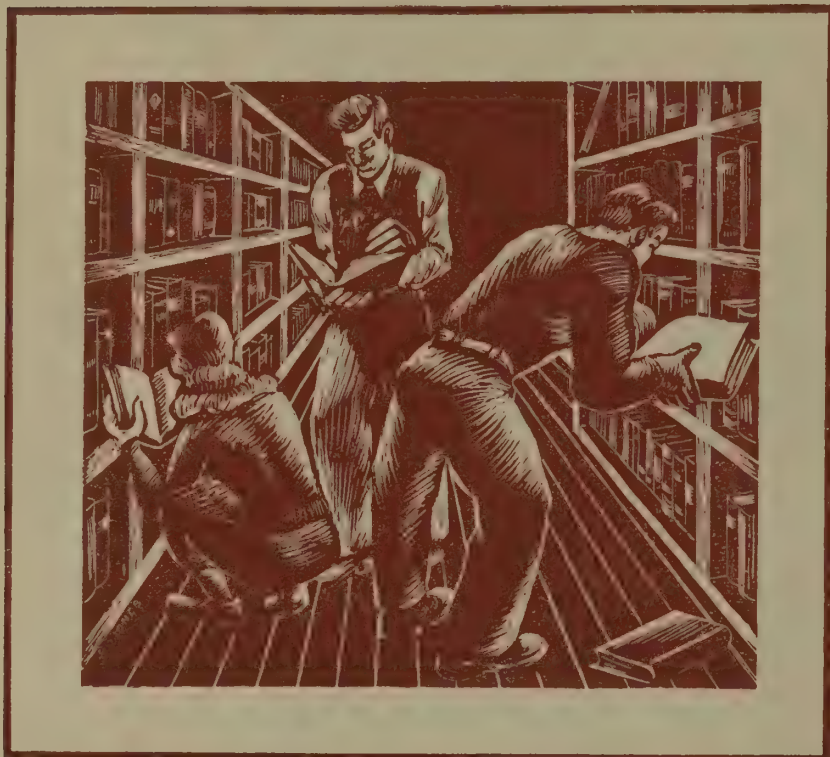

At Vespers, when we can forget our daily cares and feel an identity outside our own lives, we gain a sense of the greatness of the framework within which we live. We feel the constant presence of that framework, and we try to find our place within it, knowing that other men are doing the same and feeling their oneness with us.

At Chapel Service we feel the importance of our college days in bringing the best that is in us to the life which has been given us. We feel the privilege of education uniting us with the people around us; we feel the common purposes we share; we know that our lives are richer and fuller because of our college experience.

To us, Vespers is a symbol of the attitude we hold towards life, and towards that part of life which is Oberlin. We derive from this community of devotion a thankfulness for all that has been given us and an inspiration to make each daily task an expression of good will through which the spirit of unity will be established in men for all time.

PREFACE ~ ~ ~ ~ ~

"Towards Perfection of Form and Function"

As a first step in the preparation of the 1947 HI-O-HI, we, the editors, asked ourselves: What is the purpose and scope of a yearbook? The answer was less easy to find than one might expect it to be. At the beginning we realized that a book should be written to satisfy the needs and desires of the audience for which it is intended. You, the students of Oberlin today, are the audience we intended to serve.

Our next step was to decide just what material would fulfill your wishes in a yearbook. Then we had to choose the manner in which the material could best be presented.

Our first decision was that the annual should contain a pictorial and written account of your year, 1946-47, in Oberlin. Starting, then, with the proposition that the yearbook would review the events of the year with special attention given to those who made the events and to those who enjoyed participation in them, we looked for an appropriate form in which to present them. We felt that the traditional sections into which Oberlin yearbooks have been divided would serve our purpose best. We would gather pictures and information to be arranged into the sections of the book devoted to classification, housing, athletics, and organizations and activities.

Within these groupings we believed we could present our material with the continuity we deemed necessary in any book. With continuity as our goal, we found it advisable to depart from some of the methods followed by editors of other yearbooks.

We further divided our sections, or books, into two parts, placing written accounts of the year at the beginning on book style paper, and following this text with related pictures on conventional yearbook paper. Through this alternation of written and pictorial records, we wove our story of the year, attempting to relate the activities of all groups and individuals to each other to show the spirit of unity which we believe underlies the diversified undertakings of members of the Oberlin College community.

Another significant departure from traditional procedure took place in the House section. In place of individual stories of each house, we decided to substitute one long article which would trace briefly the history of the Oberlin residential plan, showing how the present housing system was developed. Thus, we believe, we have presented a more complete picture of the plan today, together with indications of proposed changes for the future.

Our writing style we have modified also in an effort to emphasize the importance of facts and of names. At first blush, much of the written material may appear to be little more than descriptions of occurrences already familiar to students this year. This style was adopted, however, with a view to the future when, we believe, readers will appreciate accounts of incidents long forgotten.

Unfortunately, there is necessarily an unbalanced stress upon activities of the first semester, while many second semester functions have been dealt with briefly or have been left out altogether.

Early deadlines brought about this situation. As an example, no details could be included concerning the Forum Board labor - management conference, since definite plans had not been made when the Forum article was submitted to the printers.

The result we have tried to achieve might be termed a history based not on scholarly research into the causes and details of events, but rather on a selection of the most exciting, the most stimulating, and the most memorable happenings from the written and verbal reports of those for whom the book has been prepared.

In addition, we have supplied an interpretation of those same happenings in the light of what we believed to be the spirit behind all of them. For the interpretation of events we have had to fall back on our own judgment in our attempt to see in today's activities a continuation of the history and traditions of Oberlin College.

President William E. Stevenson's arrival brings closer relationship between faculty and students

HE unified spirit which the Wednesday evening Vespers exemplifies has always served as a basis for Oberlin's academic program, and in no other phase of college life is it more manifest. A liberal education is a singularly intangible thing. No one man can hope to reach it by himself. But through cooperation with other men also striving to understand life and its complexities more fully, students realize a oneness with other students, with faculty members and with administrators of the College. All are devoted to the same purpose. All hope, through this spirit of unity, to approach Cardinal Newman's ideal of an educated man.

The establishment of a closer relationship between students and their educators strengthens this bond. During the past year one attitude was evident in Oberlin. All shared in the common desire to know each other better.

Intense interest in students and students' problems became an immediately evident characteristic of President William E. Stevenson, who became President of Oberlin College in August, 1946.

Two weeks after his arrival, the editor of the Review and the president of the summer Student Council brought to his attention misunderstandings concerning the College policy toward student marriages. Two days later a letter clarifying the College position was published and received general approval.

Shortly after the Christmas vacation, President and Mrs. Stevenson entertained students in their home at a series of informal receptions, with all students receiving invitations in turn. Having established this precedent, it is the plan of President Stevenson to become acquainted with all new students at similar receptions early each year.

Faculty activities reflected a similar desire for closer coordination with students. At the request of the YMCA and the YWCA Student-Faculty Committee, faculty homes were opened to students on several Sunday evenings for discussions of pertinent questions. In these informal groups topics such as "What's Wrong with Oberlin?" "Religion and the Bible," "Russia," and "Why Study the Past?" were discussed. Students discovered that faculty members were desirous of participating in the "World Today" chapel series, in Y Open Forums, in Forum Board-sponsored open meetings, and in advisory capacities to student organizations.

Class and inter-class activities, many of which had been discontinued or had lost some of their significance during the uncertain years of the war, resumed their normal place in the College social program. Sophomores led pajama-clad freshmen through the Apollo Theater. Class dances and informal recs were consistently popular. Class sweaters were once more obtainable and current numerals joined those worn by veterans who had originally been in earlier classes.

Uniformed men of the V-12 and Marine Units had departed, but for many of them it had been only a temporary leave. Former Unit men were in evidence in every sport and activity.

This in brief was the scene which Oberlin presented in peacetime.

ADMINISTRATION

New president and veteran administration tackle old and new problems and interests

THE appointment by the Board of Trustees of Oberlin College of a new president of the College is a comparatively rare occurrence. Such action has been taken only eight times during the 114 year history of the school. William E. Stevenson, the eighth president, has now completed his first year in this capacity, after succeeding President Ernest H. Wilkins in August, 1946.

A special interest which attracted President Stevenson's attention was the work being done by the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization. Feeling that students and faculty should become more closely acquainted with the aim of this organization, which is, as he stated, "to help peoples to speak to peoples," he created student and faculty committees for this purpose.

Carl F. Wittke, Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences and an authority on immigration history, in addition to directing curricular activities, taught courses in Racial and Cultural Minorities and in Recent American History. An honorary degree from Lawrence College and the Ohioana Medal, awarded for his book, "Against the Current," were among the honors he received during the year.

Faced with a critical housing shortage at the beginning of the fall semester, Edward F. Bosworth, Dean of Men, carried out the College's promise to "take care of everyone," by making use of "wide open spaces" in attics and auditoriums until promised government housing materialized.

In addition to administering his duties as Dean of the Graduate School of Theology, Thomas W.

Graham preached sermons in many neighboring churches. An indication of the friendship which he has established with students is the number of student marriages at which he officiates each year.

Marguerite Woodworth, Dean of Women, and Muriel C. Specht, Assistant Dean of Women, devoted much of their time to insuring the success of the Women's Symposium.

Frank H. Shaw, Director of the Conservatory of Music, was instrumental in bringing to Oberlin consistently fine music as well as providing the services of soloists and musical groups from the Conservatory.

FACULTY

Many faculty achievements in '47 indicate interest in campus issues, world affairs

BERLIN'S first postwar year saw students and faculty joining in a cooperative effort to re-examine the ideals and purposes of a liberal education. During the winter months, unusually large groups of students gathered in faculty homes for a series of Y-sponsored discussions on "What's Wrong with Oberlin?" Wide interest was aroused by this topic, and various student-faculty committees were organized for further study.

Many of the faculty members, returning to Oberlin from the armed services, shared with student veterans the problems of re-orientation to civilian life. Both groups displayed a common viewpoint by taking an active interest in forums and chapels related to world affairs and pressing their cause through the AVC.

In the field of international affairs, a student-faculty UNESCO Committee carried on research and planned an informative program for the whole campus. Professors Hope Hibbard, chairman, Wolfgang Stechow, Roger M. Shaw, John B. Mason, Clarence H. Hamilton, Howard Robinson, Lera B. Curtis, and Chester L. Shaver worked with President Stevenson and the seven student members in the organization and execution of the purposes of the Committee.

After V-E Day, Professors John W. Kurtz, John B. Mason, and Walter M. Horton spent several months in Europe studying conditions of relief and reconstruction. Mr. Kurtz was interviewing German citizens under the supervision of the U. S. Army. Mr. Mason was a member of the Hoover Food Commission. Mr. Horton visited European religious centers and attended the International Conference of the World's Student Christian Federation. All three men have shared their experiences with students through the media of informal discussions, "World Today" chapels, and panel discussions.

At the invitation of the National Peking University, Professor R. Archibald Jelliffe spent his Sabbatical leave teaching English literature at the Chinese university.

The Viking Fund granted a research fellowship to Professor Loren C. Eiseley for anthropological research on fossil man in South Africa. Professor George T. Scott was awarded a fellowship by the Navy Office of Research and Inventions for work in the field of biochemistry.

Noteworthy contributions in the arts were made by Professors Harold A. Haugh and Paul B. Arnold. Mr. Haugh, accompanied by Professor H. Arthur Dann, presented a concert in Town Hall in New York. Mr. Arnold held a "one man show" of water colors and drawings done while he was in the Army.

A responsiveness to student desires and petitions characterized moves for changes in the curriculum and requirements. Agreeing with student contention that present beginning science courses were too specialized, Professors Luke E. Steiner and Lloyd W. Taylor advocated more general courses. In response to the request for a current events course, Professors Harvey A. Wooster and John D. Lewis expressed doubt that any man in the social science division would feel qualified to teach such a course.

SENIORS

College graduates largest class in history, awards diplomas to many former students

GRADUATION for any class is a memorable occasion, but the Commencement Service for the Class of 1947 carries a special meaning. Not only is it the largest class to receive diplomas in the history of the College, but also it is the first to be graduated under President William E. Stevenson.

Many of the men in the senior class have waited through war years to return to Oberlin to complete final semesters. Others have been introduced to the campus as a result of assignment to the Navy and Marine Units here. To them in particular the Baccalaureate Service and the Processional through Tappan Square are significant.

In an election marked by novel and extensive campaigning, seniors elected Bill Girouard as president; Betty MacKay, vice-president; Evelyn Cooper, secretary-treasurer, and Margery Graham and Bob Cortelyou, social chairmen.

Highlighting the class social activities was the "Silver Serenade," the junior-senior Christmas formal, for which Jack Chantrey, Helen Adam and Nancy Johnson headed planning committees.

Nancy Guest and Jim Boyce, president and vice-president respectively of the February class, planned Commencement exercises and the traditional alumni banquet. Prior to graduation, Allen Ficken, Charlotte Kessler, and Florence Wax were elected to Phi Beta Kappa.

Juniors provide lift for social activities with extensive program of entertainment

LAST year's Sophomore Banner Dance established a reputation for big-time social events for the Class of '48, when Social Chairman Stan Rostov put forth prodigious efforts to import Alvino Rey, the first "name" band to play for an Oberlin formal since pre-war years. This year Rostov and his co-social chairman, Janice Lloyd, made plans to repeat the triumph at the Junior Prom in May with music by Elliot Lawrence.

Further proof of their social ability, the juniors contend, was evident in the Christmas Silver Serenade, which they co-sponsored with the senior class. Bids for the dance were sold out two days after the sale began. Cooperating were Pat Gillson, programs, and Myrlin Peterjohn, decorations.

As sophomores, the class also established a reputation as poor weather-predictors. Their soph ice-skating party was scheduled for four separate dates, including one this year, and all of them turned out to be iceless.

This junior class also brags proudly of an auspicious first, the sending of four of their fellows to attend the American University in Washington, D.C., under the Washington Semester plan. Class members Anna Knelle Sharp, William Eginton, Kenneth Waltz, and Leland Yeager spent a term in Washington gaining a first-hand contact with national scientific and governmental institutions.

Tony Bent headed the class of '48 as president; Sophie McClure was vice-president, and Betty Smith, secretary-treasurer. Rostov and Miss Lloyd were social chairmen.

SOPHOMORES

Class of 1949, first all-peacetime group, adds record number of vets to ranks

IS FRESHMEN last year, the Class of '49 could point proudly to the fact that they were the first current class to start college in peacetime. This year they had another feat to boast about. They added more veterans to their ranks than any other class.

The sophomores organized under the leadership of Jim Dittes, president; Hudd Targgart, vice-president; Ann Langdon, secretary-treasurer; Marty Hamburger, men's social chairman, and Pat Cobb, women's social chairman. With the freshmen, these officers planned a "Froshmore Frolic" as the opening formal of the social season, forgetting hazing hostilities in this joint effort.

Climaxing their social season was the traditional Sophomore Banner Dance in March. Dot Frey designed the banner which depicted a maroon torch upon a white background. The Dave Wayne band provided music for the occasion of the traditional unveiling of the class banner.

At Christmas time, the sophomores spread class and holiday spirit with caroling parties. Other class serenades featured the song written for the Class of '49 by Ginny Ries.

Entertainment talent was exhibited in the floor show for the "Soph Shake-up," a class get-together held in January. Singing was led by Louis Davis, while Pat Cobb headed the refreshments committee.

IN A YEAR when enrollment figures jumped to an unprecedented high, the freshman class brought to Oberlin 464 new students, 132 of them veterans. The new girls found homes in Talcott, May, Fairchild, Gulde, and Elmwood, traditional dorms for freshmen women. Most of the men were quartered in the Men's Building.

Thus geographically united, the Class of 1950 faced sophomore hazing with good spirit. Women were assigned towering dunce caps and costumes which changed with the day and the sophomore mood. Men wore their clothes inside out, backward, and upside down. Freshmen kidnapped members of the sophomore class; sophs retaliated in kind. Captives were triumphantly exchanged between halves of the Ohio Wesleyan football game.

Thirty-two candidates enthusiastically campaigned in freshman elections, with Leonard Webb winning the presidency, Bill Lippy the vice-presidency, Mervin Hutton the position of secretary-treasurer, and Dick Studer and Sunny Sundt co-chairmanship of the social committee.

Baldwin Cottage, traditional senior women's dormitory

H O U S E S

In setting of dorms scattered throughout town, students alternate work, play in college homes

PRIMARILY in the houses and dormitories many students find the expression of the unity which characterizes their college experience. There, sharing work and fun, food and conversation, joy and disappointment, undergraduates form close and enduring friendships. Out of the comradeship found there grows the belief each student holds that his college home is superior to all of the others.

Dispersed widely throughout the town, student residence halls form a federated community. From Johnson and Barrows at the southern limits of town, and from Keep, Thompson, and Noah to the north, students gathered for classes, extra-curricular activities, and social functions in the buildings encircling Tappan Square. In the classrooms of Peters Hall, in the assembly rooms of Sturges, before the lighted candles in Fairchild Chapel, in the cheering crowds at Warner Gym, on the dance floor at Rec Hall, individual students joined new and larger groups for the educational, religious, and social activities of a well-rounded college life. Yet behind the participation in the activities of the entire College remained the closer associations found within the walls of each dorm.

In another way, too, student residence halls exemplified unity. Connecting past with present, they linked the Oberlin of today with the history and tradition of the College. In their names they recall the development of a proud institution. Fairchild, Churchill, Shurtleff, Dascomb, Keep, Barrows, and Goodrich: those were the names of men who made the Oberlin tradition, whose names have taken on meanings synonymous to "home" for generations of students. Tank Hall's early years as a home for the children of missionaries of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions are early evidence of Oberlin's interest in "lands afar." May Cottage, Webster, and Elmwood, once dormitories for students of the Kindergarten-Primary Training School, are historical landmarks of another aspect of Oberlin tradition.

The present year has been a year of change in the College dormitory arrangements. To meet current needs, new dormitories have been constructed, and others have been planned for completion at the earliest possible moment. Yet the new structures will not revolutionize either the appearance of the community or the spirit prevailing in the houses of today. Rather, they will take their places as newcomers in the community just as many other new additions have done in the past. Whether the dorms be large or small, new or old, the same spirit of unity and house loyalty has always endured. In the future the loyalty and unity will find new location, but it will remain otherwise what it is today, an expression of close friendship, of experiences shared, of memories founded, among groups of people gathered for four short years to work out one phase of their lives of which Oberlin will always be an unforgettable part.

Then, as now, students will gain inspiration from the academic but relaxing atmosphere of their "home away from home."

OBERLIN RESIDENCES

College plan to construct larger dormitories reverses previous emphasis on smaller houses

WITH the springtime opening of one wing of Burton Hall, the College moved further toward the solution of the postwar men's housing shortage, and at the same time, added a second unit to the men's campus planned 20 years ago. As the work on the new men's dorm approached completion, the alumni were seeking funds for a women's dorm to become a part of a women's campus which is to include Talcott and Baldwin. Together, the development of the men's and women's campuses will reverse the trend of the past 60 years, during which period student living quarters grew less and less centralized as the College purchased, inherited, and remodeled sundry housing units scattered all over the town.

Faced with an acute shortage of rooms for men as the returning servicemen brought enrollment figures to a new peak, the College placed men's housing first on its building schedule. Wartime shifts in population and property had reduced the number of student rooms in private homes from 450 to 120. Until new quarters were made ready, substantial numbers of men, many of them veterans, occupied rows of double-decked bunks in College owned "wide open spaces." The auditorium of the Men's Building, Noah Hall's fourth floor, Goodrich House, and the third floor of the McClelland Block downtown afforded living space for about 150, where beds, footlockers, and the conveniences and inconveniences of army life made the return to college not unlike a continuation of wartime service.

When it appeared that the College plan to provide emergency barracks could not satisfy the need for the fall term, the local chapter of the American Veterans Committee and the Oberlin Times teamed up with the Office of the Dean of Men to uncover usable rooms in private homes in town. Members of the veterans' organization ringing doorbells found 57 places, while the coordinated efforts of the three groups made available somewhere between 75 and 100 temporary places in private homes.

A barracks, moved here from Willow Run, Michigan, provided quarters for 202 in the spring term. Originally scheduled for the beginning of the fall term, its opening was delayed by critical labor and material shortages. Finally, men from the emergency quarters forded a lake of mud to carry their possessions into the new structure, alternately known as "The Spider" or "Fort Bosworth," late in January. When the spring term began, the sight of bicycles parked before a building, traditional evidences of Oberlin domesticity, had become a familiar part of the appearance of the new emergency dormitory.

Burton Hall, rushed towards completion to help relieve the pressure for men's rooms, joined Noah Hall as part of the permanent men's campus of the future. In 1928 the Faculty, and in 1929, the Board of Trustees approved plans for a group of men's dormitories to occupy more than one-half of the block bounded by Professor, Lorrain, Woodland, and Union streets. Of the 500 men to be housed in the proposed buildings, Noah and Burton together will accommodate about 275. As the time to break ground for Burton Hall approached in the winter of 1946, the plans were changed. The new building replaces two 100-man dormitories of the earlier blueprint. According to most recent announcements, smaller buildings of a similar architectural type will eventually complete "a campus on which the life of men can be organized and developed in such a way as to stimulate scholarly ambition and to create an active masculine social atmosphere."

Out of the unprecedented needs of married students, an Oberlin residential subdivision grew during the year 1946. In Botany Lane, a colony of trailers transported here from Ohio war-production centers, 50 married couples, a few of them with children, mixed married life with academic pursuits. Small and tidy, the trailers, occupying the site of the Botany Department's gardens, came equipped with kitchen facilities, though detached laundry and washing accommodations served the entire community. Others of the more than 100 student couples lived in apartments in town. Many of these units were in College buildings converted from dormitory use.

In the trailers and apartments developed a kind of student life almost completely new to

tofore, a few married graduate students in Theology had made up part of the College enrollment, but returning veterans and their wives added something different to the life of the community. They were a relatively large group sharing part of their activities with the whole college, but carrying on at the same time, a phase of their lives which most students reserve until after graduation. Their classes and library study brought married students into the daily undergraduate routine. Many of them took part in the extra-curricular activities of the College. Others held board jobs and many of the young women, not students themselves, worked in administration and departmental offices, and in the hospital. All but a few perhaps enjoyed dances, athletic games, and concerts along with the unmarried undergraduate students.

Despite the many ways in which the married students lived like the unmarried students, the former added much that was new to the Oberlin scene. Carrying groceries or walking children across Tappan Square on fine days, they mixed the problems of homemaking with the work and recreation of college life. And in their own small, private homes, they exchanged visits among themselves, getting together for evenings of bridge or conversation, a habit more typical of young married people anywhere than of Oberlin students in particular.

Although the planning, construction, and occupation of the new student housing facilities made news for the college and town papers, older dorms made the pattern into which the great majority of students fitted their college lives. Often held up to criticism as inefficient to operate, inconvenient in location, or inadequate in facilities, Oberlin dormitories were the places where boy met girl and conservatory student met college student, where representatives of the many races and regions of the country, and even of the world, came together, and where friendships developed.

Even in the old and well-established houses, college life did not proceed without some deviations from the usual pattern. Students returning to Cranford after the summer vacation lived amidst a lack of furniture for the first few weeks of the year, and women at Grey Gables felt the absence of the piano without which the after-dinner song sessions suffered. The statue of General Shurtleff, newly-cleaned, beamed down from its hilltop pedestal, while Shurtleff women shifted lamps, books, and shoes in and out of the way of workmen remodeling their rooms. On the other hand, students moved into the comfort of freshly painted and repaired rooms at widely-separated Lord and Thompson Cottages as the school year started.

With or without electricians, carpenters, and painters, dormitories were the setting for varied student activities. The Women's Self-Government League supervised women's affairs through housing units. The parlors, with logs ablaze in the fireplaces on winter nights, were the scenes of countless bridge games and much informal conversation. Within the walls of individual rooms, students carried on daily tasks of study mixed with the traditional pleasures of bull sessions and spreads. Primarily social in nature, house activities included formal dances and open houses for all, while a few groups managed special functions that left imprints on the memories of those who took part. Baldwin carried off the trophy in the Homecoming Decoration competition. Noah held a party and dance in its spacious basement among stored bedding and furniture, and French House marked the occasion of the naming of the rooms in French with something of an open house with faculty and students inspecting the rooms. Fairchild women followed a hayride with a party in the basement which had taken on the appearance of a "dive" for the evening. Elmwood shared a Hallowe'en party with invading town youngsters.

While in the dormitories the individual oriented himself to the group, adjusting private needs and wishes to those of roommates and housemates living in close proximity, there too he expressed his individuality more than at any other place on campus. In his own room, each student carried out many of the essential tasks of daily life; there he kept his personal possessions, from there he maintained his contact with parents and friends outside Oberlin by means of letters. To the dormitories, too, students brought their hobbies and special interests. Modern dance enthusiasts and drum majorettes practiced their specialties while bookworms devoured their favorite works. Players in the ODA and Mummers casts murmured lines while housemates prepared term papers. Above all, the dorm was home to those who lived there.

Besides being the setting for individual tasks and group social functions, dormitories divided the campus into units by which Oberlin continued its traditional active interest in the lives of peoples of foreign lands. Through dormitory campaigns, the Consolidated Relief Drive committee collected the greater part of their funds, and each house set up a concession for the CRD Carnival in the spring. In addition, many of the houses conducted drives individually for food and clothing to supplement the results of the campus-wide relief drive.

Even to newcomers arriving when radical changes were taking place in the housing arrangements, the customs and manners of Oberlin life seem firmly established in past and tradition, and unlikely to change markedly in the future. New arrivals found themselves subject to a rather complete set of local rules covering the times of women's arrivals and departures from dorms, the hours when quiet must prevail, the use of automobiles by students, and of course, the use of all facilities which must be shared by the entire community. At least as forceful as the written regulations, unwritten codes of behavior tend to make Oberlin life what it is.

In the appearance of most Oberlin dormitories there is evidence of durability like that in the manifestations of its social life. As all of the dormitories of today have come into use in the past 60 years, approximately one-half of Oberlin's historical span, so have most of the characteristic manners and traditions of student life. Baldwin and Talcott, which have served longest of all as College dormitories, date back to 1887 when no student societies included both men and women, and all students attended religious services eight times weekly.

As new units came into the family of Oberlin student dwellings, the strict rules governing the lives of students underwent changes. Both the appearance of the College community and the way of student life evolved slowly toward what they have become today. Late in the decade known far and wide as the "Gay Nineties," a writer in the Atlantic Monthly said of Oberlin, "There is little of that sense of leisure which lingers in the older colleges, and gives the undergraduate the feeling that the four years will never run their course; there is, in its place, an alert perception of the value of the time of preparation, and a great eagerness to get to work."

Vestiges of the "insistent and strenuous" moral life which the same writer described have come down to the modern Oberlin, just as dormitories have passed from one generation of students to the next. Before the beginning of the century, Lord Cottage had been erected and repaired once after a fire, and May Cottage, Nancy Squire, and Burroughs Hall (now Elmwood Cottage) were in use as residences for students of the Oberlin Kindergarten-Primary Training School. Dascomb, Churchill, Barrows, Allencroft, the Men's Building, Keep, Thompson, and others became College dormitories before the first World War. In them, and in others such as Pyle Inn and Embassy, then private women's dormitories without their modern names, there continued what a Review columnist described in 1895 as a "social life unique and individual, developed by evolution with an occasional breaking of precedents and infusion of new blood."

Breaks with the past did not always come without opposition from those who held tenaciously with existing practices. The rule that men had to be in at 10 o'clock was dropped in 1896, but it was 21 years later before students could smoke without being subject to dismissal from school. Even then, the official statement strongly urged students to abstain from the use of tobacco. In the same year, 1919, mixed social dancing took its place among the pleasures permitted Oberlin students. Along the course of the years, the ban on card playing vanished and student societies came to include members of both sexes. As late as 1946, Student Council activity led the way in the removal of the rule against smoking in the parlors of women's dormitories. The cigarette in the parlor after dinner immediately became an Oberlin custom.

More than 20 years ago President King urged the Board of Trustees to undertake a building program with emphasis on providing new dormitory accommodations for students. In the years intervening between his message and the second World War, only Noah Hall and the Theological Quadrangle were constructed. Buildings taken over from private owners and the Kindergarten-Primary School met the urgent need, but many have always been considered old and inefficient.

With the postwar building program under way, Oberlin has made another break with the past. It is likely that before many years pass, most students here will live in larger, modern dorms on integrated men's and women's campuses. Even then, if present plans are carried out, many of the housing units now in use will serve student generations of the future. In them, the habits and customs of present day student life will afford the background for innovations yet to be made. Those traditions which have survived the changes of the past will continue to be the framework of the heritage of succeeding generations.

Informal student-faculty discussion

A C T I V I T I E S

Some organizations resume activity, others expand as veterans take over positions of responsibility

SUBJECT each year to much discussion and publicity is the conflict between academic studies and extra-curricular activities. Some students feel strongly the necessity for maintaining a high academic record and sometimes conclude that publications, clubs, and other organizations are of minor importance in comparison to studies. Others hold differing views.

But whether students spend more or less time in outside activities, the spirit of working together, whether it be on the Review Hell Issue, at a Musical Union rehearsal, or in a CRD Variety Show, is always present.

Opportunities in the field of extra-curricular work are so numerous that any student will be likely to find one in which he is interested, one which will broaden his perspective and enable him to evaluate more easily the material and the immaterial.

These in general are the potential benefits in the Oberlin program.

Significant within clubs, publications, student governing bodies and other campus groups during the past year was the large number of older male students occupying positions of responsibility. In addition, some organizations expanded with the increased enrollment, and some activities, not in existence or curtailed during the war, were resumed.

Under the chairmanship of Bill Bosworth and jointly sponsored by the YMCA, the Bureau of Appointments and the Bureau of Admissions, the first Men's Career Conference since 1941 was held in December. With the return of Professor J. Jeffery Auer, the Forensic Union was reorganized. The Review returned to its pre-war policy of semi-weekly publication. Three student dance bands appeared during the winter. The Oblivion, initiated in 1945 as a humor magazine, was merged with the Yeoman, literary magazine, after Ralph Brown, editor of the Oblivion, failed to receive adequate student cooperation in preparation of material for the publication.

After a three-year moratorium the Mummers Club was reorganized in the spring of 1946 and presented an original musical play.

Many students were attracted to the American Veterans Committee, though it is not a College organization. This group, under the leadership of Jake Gruber, aided the Office of the Dean of Men materially in obtaining living quarters for men by canvassing the town for available rooms.

Interest in political affairs was evidenced by the formation of an FEPC Council composed of students, faculty and townspeople which actively campaigned in support of fair employment legislation in Ohio.

Fine music, always an Oberlin tradition, was not forgotten during the year. The Musical Union's performance of the "Messiah" was described by Professor James H. Hall as a "magnificent volume of tone." Nationally appreciated musicians and musical groups were included in the annual Artist's Recital series.

Pervading all these activities, though possibly not making its presence as evident as in, for example, a Wednesday Vesper Service, was that element in our lives which we can feel but can not adequately define, the Oberlin spirit.

GOVERNMENT

Student governing units revise outmoded policies to meet post-war campus needs

EMPHASIS upon the establishment of a closer relationship between the students and their governing body provided the basis for the 1946-47 Student Council policy.

Through the Dormitory Council which gave each house a representative at Council meetings, and through the medium of a bulletin board and a suggestion box in Peters Court, the student body was afforded opportunities to voice opinions at meetings and to follow all Council proceedings.

Departing from previous procedures, the Student Council elected its own officers. Members selected Ellen Forbes to preside, Bill Killian as vice-president; Bunny Mills, recording secretary and Lloyd Frank, treasurer. The arduous work of planning and supervising campus elections was directed by John Barlow and Robert Lichtwardt, co-chairmen of the elections committee. Other Council members were Jean Morisuye, Jim Sunshine, Dorothy Kohli, Sam Jones, Tuck Gilbert, Anne Webb and Bill Bosworth.

Taking an active interest in mutual problems of other colleges with a view toward the solution of similar problems at Oberlin, the Council delegated John Copeland and Dolores Kremarek to attend the International Union of Students Conference at Chicago during the Christmas vacation. Also, Ellen Forbes was the Council delegate at the Midwestern Student Government Conference at Grinnell, Iowa, in November.

In other Council activities Lloyd Frank and Sam Jones served on the committee which prepared the Dance Band Code, Ellen Forbes headed the Inter-racial Committee, which was also sponsored by the YMCA and YWCA, Jim Sunshine and Sam Jones made up the Publications Committee, Pat Long was chairman of the Housemother Committee, and Ellen Forbes, John Copeland, Sam Jones and Jim Sunshine worked on proposals based on reports received from the IUS convention which would introduce changes in the curriculum.

REVISION and simplification of its constitution comprised the major work of the Women's Self-Government League during the year. As a result of proposals worked out by Helen Lindsley and Dorothy Taylor, a committee consisting of Gertrude Verstegen, president of the governing body; Dale McCutcheon, secretary; Harriet Heywood, treasurer, and Martha Lipson, junior class representative to the WSGL Board, submitted a new constitution which consolidated the powers of the executive board and the Women's Senate, giving responsibility to a more representative body of students.

The major change in the new constitution which was referred to the Student Council for further study, was the elimination of the WSGL Board. Duties of the Board members were transferred to special groups selected from members of the Women's Senate. In addition to house presidents and officers of the WSGL, vice-presidents of freshman houses as well as the presidents of the WAA and the YWCA were appointed to the Women's Senate.

With Elizabeth Rugh acting as chairman, the WSGL supervised the four-day hazing period for freshman women at the beginning of the fall semester.

Other WSGL Board members who directed activities of the organization were Nancy W. Chapin, Pat Wood, Edith Cripe, Mary Louise Beckman, Mary Elizabeth Yeend, Alice Tear, and Betty Kullman, who was in charge of arrangements for the Women's Symposium.

THE formation and institution of a new room assignment policy for men was the chief accomplishment of the Men's Board during the year. In accordance with the provisions of this plan, men were given preference according to class in a drawing system for rooms similar to that used by College women.

With Dean Edward F. Bosworth acting as chairman, the group also outlined a program which eased overcrowded conditions in men's dormitories at the end of the fall semester. Men living in temporary quarters were moved to one wing of Burton Hall and to the barracks, an FPMA housing project.

When men assigned to the cafeteria for the winter semester requested transfer to coeducational dining halls, the Men's Board announced a plan whereby such transfers could be effected, giving priority to upperclassmen.

In addition to Dean Bosworth, six faculty members served on the Board, including Professors Lysle K. Butler, John W. Kurtz, George O. Lillich, and Leonard A. Stidley, and Dr. Roger M. Shaw and Dean Carl F. Wittke.

After an examination of approximately 15 applicants, the Student Council selected Jim Dittes, Bill Parmenter and Stan Rostov to fill vacancies on the Board and to work with former members Hillis Miller, Tuck Gilbert, and Jack Kinkopf, secretary.

A sub-committee of the Board, the Joint Disciplinary Committee was appointed to act on cases which might be referred to it. Complementing this committee were two faculty members, Professors Kurtz and Stidley, and two students, Bill Parmenter and Jim Dittes.

OPERATING under the old system for the first full year since the departure of the Navy and Marine Units, the Honor Court resumed its former duties: the education of the student body concerning the principles and spirit of the Honor System; the correction of all conditions not conducive to good operation of the system, and the administration of all cases of violation of the Honor System.

Instituted as a mature and intelligent way of conducting examinations and laboratory work, the Honor System proposed to maintain high standards of honor in respect to all curricular work. It abolished proctoring by the faculty, and gave the student full responsibility for his honesty.

In enforcing the Honor System, Hillis Miller, chairman of the Honor Court, issued a statement early in November which warned students against talking aloud during any examination.

In accordance with the new Student Council constitution, the chairman nominated eight persons as members, and the Student Council ratified the nominations. Chosen to serve again were Alice Tear, Lloyd Frank, Barbara Bradley, Duane Smith, and William O'Connor. Serving for the first time were Barton Haggard, Mary Drummond, and Dorothy Schrum. Alice Tear was secretary for the Court.

LONG with the enlarged student body this year came a new and enlarged social program presented by the Recreation Committee under the chairmanship of Jeff Young. Assisting on the committee were Charlie Trewin, Jack Kinkopf, Al Palubinskas, Dick Shafer, Jerre Smith, Nancy McCurdy, King Stewart, Karl Soller, Kelly Truitt and Bill Wheat.

After-game tea dances were held at Rec Hall during the football season, and the Homecoming Dance helped celebrants after the Denison victory. Friday night square dances with Dan Kinsey calling were guaranteed to wear out the strongest of participants.

Almost without exception the formal dances were attended to fullest capacity, including the "Froshmore Frolic," the "Silver Serenade," the Sophomore Banner Dance and the Junior Prom.

Saturday night All-Colleges found one of three campus bands, the Dave-Wayne band led jointly by Dave Weimer and Wayne Lonsdorf, Jerry Holesovsky's "Campus Cavaliers," and Bruce West's orchestra, playing to overflowing crowds in Warner Gym, Rec Hall or the Cafeteria.

At the beginning of the second semester Stan Rostov and Wayne Lonsdorf were named to head a committee to seek ways and means of further improving the recreational program.

PUBLICATIONS

Review returns to semi-weekly schedule, Hi-O-Hi restaffs; Oblivion, Yeoman merge

WITH the opening of the fall term in October, the Review returned to a semi-weekly publication schedule for the first time since May, 1943. For the period during which the staff was rebuilt to handle the increased work, the editors chose to return to the tabloid size used during the war.

Bill O'Connor headed the staff as editor-in-chief, and Bob Calvert edited the sports page. Nancy Johnson moved up to share the associate editor's duties with Dorothy Kohli as the fall term began. Dave Fowler joined George Healy in the managing editor's role, the two men alternating issues. Jim Dittes, managing editor of the Review before joining the Navy, returned to a city editor's job, sharing the task with Audrey Nelson, Sam Gallo, and Jim Sunshine.

Vera Gould led a business staff that set itself to the task of revising advertising contracts to fit current conditions. Bill Warren stepped into the advertising manager's spot as the term began. Jack Arbour and Martha Hayward handled the circulation chores.

At the beginning of the spring semester Dave

Fowler was appointed editor-in-chief, while Jack Arbour was promoted to the position of business manager. Audrey Nelson and Jim Dittes were named managing editors.

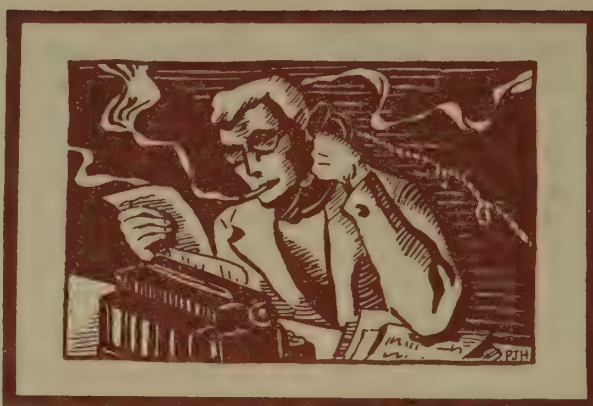

As the new schedule became routine, the Review looked back to the day of the election of Mr. William E. Stevenson to the presidency of the College as one of the brightest days in its history. Receiving the news of the Trustees' selection at about 4:30 on the afternoon of Friday, May 31, the staff brought out a paper that reached all of the dining halls before dinner.

Bending its policies to please its readers, the Review carried fewer opinion columns on current national and international affairs. Instead the editorial columns carried opinions on campus and local issues. Lending support to the ration meal plan, the Review aroused a little opposition, while its support for the CRD and changes in the WSGL constitution awakened little campus interest.

On a campus dominated by veterans apparently weary of world problems discussed seriously, two light features met popular approval. The Editor's Celluloid Cuff, a favorite for several years, continued to entertain readers, while a new type ad, Ohly's "On the Corner," a man-about-campus column written by Bill Ward, took the campus by storm. In deciding to discontinue the ad at one time the Review staff brought upon itself a shower of letters representing the hottest controversy of the year. Recognizing an overwhelming popular demand, they put the column back on the corner of the back page after one week.

BSING a comparatively new idea in its year-book, the 1947 HI-O-HI Staff separated pictorial material and descriptive copy, putting the former on enamel stock and the latter on antique paper. This was done in an attempt to present a more attractive publication which would allow for greater continuity in carrying the story of the year through the book.

Under the supervision of John Rumely, editor-in-chief, the staff commenced work in the spring of 1946. At that time, following an intensive Student Council investigation of HI-O-HI activities requested by Professor Ralph H. Singleton, HI-O-HI adviser, the Council interviewed applicants for the top student position on the staff.

After selecting the editor, the Council approved the recommendation of its Publications Committee and nominated Bob Collins to be business manager.

Appointments of Bob Avery and Bob Walton as associate editors and of Sam Dudley as advertising manager were also sanctioned by the Council.

A large part of the book was completed during the first semester. Photography was under the direction of Clair Siddall aided by Jim Scott, Dave Mayer, Jim Munger and Pat Videto. Pat Finley planned the art work assisted by Cliff Spindler, Dot Frey, and Stuart Jones. Bill Baker headed the mounting staff.

Arrangements for house pictures were made by Gloria Wise who also edited the house section together with Bill O'Connor. Nana Bragg organized material in the activities section, while Kathryn Campbell edited the faculty pages. Bob Calvert prepared the sports section with the help of June Ure and Steve Tulin.

Responsible for much of the copy work were editorial staff members Marilyn Mack, Marion Smith, Mary Auer, Doris Holt, Lois Larsen, Gladys Deeter, Nancy Guest and Jean Reitsman.

Bob Collins planned the advertising campaign, and Sam Dudley directed the work of solicitors.

BERGING humor with literary talent, editors Robert Axtmann of the Yeoman and Ralph Brown of the Oblivion effected a new type of magazine including all varieties of the arts of photography, sketching and literature. With the combined funds from the organizations' treasuries, the board was able to present a larger publication under the name of the older of the two, the Yeoman.

Under the leadership of co-editors Brown and Axtmann, the editorial board composed of Carrie Yoffe, Donald Sobol, Phyllis Freeland, Paul Gordon and Thaleia Cheronis selected from the large number of contributions deposited in its box in Peters Court sketches, essays, short stories, poems, and translations from Spanish works for the Christmas issue.

After the war years when there was a dearth of material of suitable quality, the Yeoman found selections of high caliber in the poetry of John Bennett, Patience Haley and Jean Ann Pocta; in the prose of Peter Hanke, Therese Henkle, George Haley, Richard Weekes, Helen Kross, Charlotte Stolmaker, and Sam Gallo; in the art work of Mary Hoyt and in the photography of David Mayer, Robert Welty, and Richard Judson.

With Selma Sherman spurring interest in a humor magazine on campus, the Oblivion was brought to life last year by student subscriptions and was patterned after the New Yorker magazine. The Oblivion experienced many difficulties until the Student Council placed the publication on the activity card last spring. During its infant months difficulties were found mainly in the lack of creative and original contributions from the student body. With the advent of Larry DeMott and Ralph Brown, the quality of material took a definite upswing, but the magazine could not subsist on the talents of two men.

With Ralph Burhans handling finances in the position of business manager, the merger resulted in a magazine well received by the students.

CHRISTIAN

Religious organizations cooperate to offer programs of service and social action

TURNING their efforts into the fields of national and international affairs, community service, campus discussion and religious activities, the Young Women's Christian Association has endeavored to meet the needs of campus and community through both study and action.

Stressing the need to make Christian ideals practical through the experience of service was the aim of the executive committee led by president Mary Louise Beckman and advised by executive secretary Elizabeth Blakesley. Other members of the committee were first vice-president Joan Brown, second vice-president Alice Spore, treasurer Edith Schweser, secretary Virginia Gilmore, social secretary Martha Wake-land, and the commission heads: Eleanor Letts, National and International Affairs; Marilyn Snyder, Community Service; Jane Klein, Religion, and Patricia Millar, Campus Coordinator. Ex-officio members of the YWCA executive committee were Gertrude Versteegen, WSGL president, and M. B. Yeend, WAA head.

To determine the purpose of student Christian associations and their stands on issues of national and world significance, the National Student Assembly of 2000 "Y" delegates met at the University of Illinois at Christmas time. Gathering only once in every student generation, this group outlined plans to make the country realize the importance of the "Y". Delegates who participated in the discussions on problems of growth of persons, Christian heritage, social responsibilities, and international problems were Barbara Bradley, Alice Spore, Kay Leiper, Judy Holaday, Mary Jo Clark, and Mary Louise Beckman.

Anxious to increase the scope of its work, the freshman YWCA group led by Alice Spore planned social and discussion programs in addition to assisting in arrangements for the CRD benefit bridge tournament.

Serving as a link between the cabinet and the student membership was the "Y" rep group which revised the organization's constitution.

TRESSING throughout the year a program of cooperation with the YWCA, the Young Men's Christian Association, led by Tuck Gilbert, president, sponsored extensive programs in 26 fields in its 65th year on the campus.

Serving on the Executive Committee with President Gilbert were Charlie Harpole, vice-president; Dick Hirshberg, secretary, and Jim Farmer, treasurer, while Robert Rankin, executive secretary of the YMCA, advised the group.

Heading other committees, and comprising the Student Cabinet together with the elected officers, were Charlie Harpole, All Association; Don Taub, Membership; Bart Haggard, Office; Phil Lewis, Publicity; Chuck Hubbell, Religious Conference; Art Christofersen, Special Services; Charlie Harpole, Vespers; Jack Clemence, Children's Home; Serge Glagolev, Deputations; Dick Anliot, Phillis Wheatley, Center; Sam Jones, Social Action; John Barlow, World Citizenship Forum; Earl Lowell, Chance Creek; Ken Hicks, Freshman Club; Irving Forbes, Married Students Club; Louis Davis, Recreation; Bart Haigh, Student-Faculty; Silas Townsend, Student Opinion; Bob Sandman, Tours, and Bill Bosworth, Vacations.

Other Cabinet members included leaders of Special Interest Groups who held discussions on topics of current and permanent interest. These were: Religion in Life, Charlie Andrews; The Church Today, John Fairfield; Race Relations, Rod Douglas; World Peace, Henry Maier, and Men-Women Relations, Ed McCormick.

Four delegates from the YMCA, Glen Mellinger, Jim Wang, Serge Glagolev and Tuck Gilbert, joined five representatives from the YWCA at the Student Christian Association Assembly at the University of Illinois during Christmas vacation. Mrs. Wolfgang Stechow, Dean Thomas W. Graham, Robert Rankin, and Elizabeth Blakesley accompanied the group which aided in the preparation of the "Affirmation of Christian Faith" which was approved by the Assembly.

Student-Faculty discussions for which members of the faculty entertained students in their homes on Sunday evenings were led by YMCA and YWCA committee members under the leadership of Bart Haigh and Pat Millar.

Christmas Vespers, co-sponsored with the YWCA, was an inspiring climax for all activities.

EMPHASIZING the promotion of an understanding of liberal religion on the college campus; aiding young people discover the convictions, traditions and practices of the Unitarian Church, and in order to share through study and work in the building of a just social order which will guarantee equal rights and opportunities to all persons irrespective of race, class, religion or nationality, the Unitarian Channing Club planned programs aimed at informing students of the relation between religion and society and to stimulate discussion and sociability.

During the first semester programs were devoted to religion and its place in society. Professor Warren Taylor spoke on "Philosophy of Unitarianism"; Dean Carl Wittke about the "Church and Social Action"; Dr. Everett Baker, minister of the Cleveland Unitarian Church, about "Faith for Free Men" and Dr. Clarence Ward on "Modern Interpretations of the Bible."

On the lighter side was the opening program of the year at which Professor and Mrs. Wolfgang Stechow led the entertainment. Under the leadership of the officers, Irving Forbes, president; Nancy Guest, program chairman; Katherine Mackey, secretary; Shirley Rhea, treasurer; and Charles Hubbell, publicity chairman, the Club was expanded according to its new constitution. Committee members were Jean Ann Pocta, Hope Jensen, Phyllis Dodge, Oscar Stine, Alice Spore, Hayden Summerfield and Nancy W. Chapin.

EWL Y organized this year, the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship centered its activities in study of the Bible under the leadership of Fred Keefe. In addition to participation in services of the local churches, the members gathered daily at noontime for a few minutes of prayer.

Interested in the international field, the group sent Jack Wells and Bardy McCandless to the International Missionary Convention at the University of Toronto. To further their interests in social welfare, members collected money to be sent to the leper hospital in Carville, Louisiana.

One consolation for Oberlin's loss in the soccer game with Wheaton was the party with the Wheaton team in James Brand House.

Officers of the Fellowship who have planned the varied activities of the group which range from discussions to sleigh rides were Jack Wells, president; Gennet Maxon, vice-president; David Heydenburk, secretary-treasurer, and John Wilder and Edward Schulte, publicity directors.

Musical Union gives Handel's "Messiah," broadcasts Elwell's "Lincoln" premiere

WITH its presentation of Handel's "Messiah" for the first time since 1943, the Musical Union revived a 60-year old Christmas-time tradition. Directed by Professor Maurice Kessler, the choir and the Conservatory Orchestra presented the familiar choruses in Finney Chapel before a capacity crowd.

The Musical Union, composed of students, faculty and townspeople, numbered 250. Among the choruses they sang were "For unto us a Child is born," "Glory to God," the Amen Fugue and the Hallelujah Chorus. Soloists for the oratorio were Miss Maurine Parzybok of Chicago, Professors Daniel A. Harris and Harold A. Haugh, and Miss Nellie Stuart, all of the Conservatory faculty. Professor Leo C. Holden accompanied at the organ, and Miss Beryl Ladd on the harpsichord. Preceding the concert, the brass choir played from the bell tower in Finney Chapel.

A distinguished first performance of Herbert Elwell's "Requiem" was presented by the group in February in memory of Abraham Lincoln. For his work and interpretation of the James Gould Fletcher poem "Lincoln," Mr. Elwell received the Paderewski award. In the musical score he paralleled the spoken text to portray the emotional intensity of the chaotic setting of the Civil War and Lincoln's life. Professor Daniel A. Harris was the baritone soloist.

In the spring the Musical Union sang Bach's "Passion According to St. Matthew."

AFTER five years of wartime quarantine, the Women's Glee Club planned to resume its spring concert tour, thus placing its program once again on a pre-war basis.

Directed by John E. Wirkler, affectionately known as "Mr. Jack," the Glee Club made its first appearance of the year singing with the Men's Glee Club at the Armistice Day chapel. The program featured "Sad Prophet Treading O'er Timeless Sands" by Bill Stacey, a former Conservatory student who was killed in action.

Again in conjunction with the Men's Glee Club, the group provided the musical background for the annual modern dance Christmas program. Carols were sung by both Clubs, by soloists Lee Wolovsky and Nellie Stuart, and by a voice trio composed of Ann Duncan, Gladys Ewing, and Marjory Sharp.

Officers who directed the activities of the Club and who planned the spring concert in Finney Chapel were Julia Taylor, president; Betty Barnes, secretary-treasurer, and May Hanning, social chairman. Edith Cripe, pianist, and Mary Graham, violinist, accompanied the Glee Club.

MARKING his forty-fifth year with the Men's Glee Club, "Mr. Jack" Wirkler led the group well on the way back to its pre-war status. Two concentrated tours in the spring, one to Detroit, Michigan, and the other to Jamestown, New York, marked the year's program.

Thirty-six voices swelled the chorus at the twice-weekly rehearsals, which were times for relaxation as well as vocalization. After the annual program in Finney Chapel at Christmas, held in conjunction with the Women's Glee Club and the Modern Dance Group, a spontaneous carol sing was held. The home concert on March 15 rounded out a successful season.

Gordon Hoddinott, president; Wilson Bent, secretary, and James Smith, social chairman, helped in the arrangements for a formal, once more with the Women's Glee Club, late in the spring.

SUPPLEMENTING their usual round of accompanying productions of the Musical Union and senior recitals, the students and faculty of the Conservatory Orchestra combined their talents for the presentation of the Mozart Festival, Sunday, November 17.

Examples of Mozart's ensemble, operatic, instrumental, liturgical, and orchestral writings were planned under the direction of Professor Reber N. Johnson; ensemble numbers were supervised by Professors John Frazer and George E. Waln. Soloists were Professors Harold A. Haugh and Wolfgang Stechow, Mr. Emil C. Danenberg, and William York. Members of the string quartet who also played were Jerry Holesovsky, Frank Scocozza, Harry Taub, and Willard Warch.

Directed by Professor Maurice Kessler, the Orchestra combined its talents with those of the Musical Union in the choral group's three appearances.

MUSICAL artists who appeared during the winter season on the annual Recital Series were received by near-capacity crowds at every performance in Finney Chapel. The extensive interest among students in hearing musicians and musical groups was stimulated by the unusually high caliber of the artists selected for the programs.

Claudio Arrau, Chilean pianist, opened the 65th season, and was followed by Maryla Jonas, noted Polish-born pianist; the Stuyvesant String Quartet, which presented three concerts; Isaac Stern, renowned violinist; Maggie Teyte, English soprano, and Helen Traubel, recognized as a leading Wagnerian soprano.

Also included in the series were three stimulating concerts presented by the Cleveland Symphony Orchestra directed by George Szell. Professor James H. Hall of the Conservatory faculty, writing in the Review, described the first of these concerts as being "both bigger and better than we usually hear from this organization".

Independent of the Artist Recital program, several other musicians made appearances in Oberlin this year. Ralph Kirkpatrick, harpsichordist, and Alexander Schneider, violinist, presented a program of 18th century music under the sponsorship of the Oberlin chapter of Pi Kappa Lambda, national music honor society. In the same week John Jacob Niles, nationally known singer of early American ballads, appeared before an Oberlin audience.

Early in December Marcel Dupre, one of the best known organists in the world and professor at the Paris Conservatoire, presented an enjoyable organ recital in Warner Hall.

HIGHLIGHT of the Symphonic Band Concert in the spring was the premiere performance of Michael Haydn's "Turkish March," under the baton of Richard Franko Goldman. Mr. Goldman, associate conductor of the Goldman Band in New York; appeared as guest conductor for the concert which was presented in Warner Hall April 17.

Leadership personnel of the band were Mr. Arthur Williams, director; Edwin Heilakka, student director; Monroe Harris, associate; Robert Hodgkinson, president; Eleanor Jameson, secretary; Thomas Gayters, business manager; Candace Ramsey and Joe Contino, social representatives.

The combined Marching Band and Women's Band, under the leadership of Mr. Williams, participated with visiting bands in festival performances at the home football games as well as at Bowling Green University during the year. This was the first time in the history of Oberlin College that such performances have been given with the visiting band. Other activities of the Marching Band included playing for the Intramural Carnival, March seventh. The Women's Band played at the Yale-Princeton basketball game, February 27.

Allan Millikan was drum major, and majorettes were Annabelle Flitcraft, Mildred Quon, Katherine Bart and Jo Anderson.

DRAMATICS

ODA gives works of Beaumarchais, Thurber, and Tchekov; Mummers present musical

DRAMATIC works of France, Russia, and America were presented by the Oberlin Dramatic Association in their productions during the year. Beaumarchais' "Marriage of Figaro," Elliot Nugent and James Thurber's "Male Animal," and an Anton Tchekov play were selected by the ODA Board and directed by J. Stanton McLaughlin, adviser.

Gabriel Gorombey served as president of the board. Assisting him were Tom Hill, actors' representative; Ed Lorenz, stage manager; George Wilcox, electrician; Mary Ellen Warters, property manager; Thaleia Cheronis, costume manager; Nancy Lowell, makeup manager; Ruth Farmer, business manager; Therese Henkle, publicity manager, and Emily Kalichstein, secretary.

Vivifying the dominant theme of the 18th century, the French Revolution, the "Marriage of Figaro" combined sophisticated wit and subtle characterization with a satirical comment upon an effete aristocracy. Elinor Josephson as Figaro's fiancée, Suzanne; Tom Hill as the Count d'Almaviva; Gabriel Gorombey as Figaro; Selma Sherman as Cherubino; Janet Toohy as Fanchette; Martha Flint as the Countess; Hugh Martin as Dr. Bartholo; Dick Hill as Bazile; Armand Wheeler as Antonio; Jack Paul as Brid Oison; Roslyn Zeit-chick as Marceline, and Kenneth Waltz as Double Main held the leading roles in this play.

"The Male Animal" concerned the battle of a college instructor, Tommy Turner, played by Hank Wardle, against the opposition of athletics and the board of trustees. Alice Boston as the professor's wife, Ellen; Gerald Runkle as "Whirling Joe" Ferguson, one time football great; Judy Seiberling as Pat Stanley; Dave Burgoon as Wally Meyers, present star of the football team; David Sigsworth as Michael Barnes, the campus literary figure; Hugh Snyder as Dean Damon; Wilson Bent as Ed Keller; Dona Thoms as Mrs. Damon; Therese Henkle as Myrtie; Wally Seaton as Nutsy Miller; Judy Bergstrom as Emma, the maid, and Tom Hill as the reporter constituted the remainder of the cast.

RETURNING to Oberlin, veterans were surprised to discover that there were actually females behind the skirts in the post-war Mummers' production, "Thirty Days Hath Terwilliger."

In the script written by Roy Taylor and Ralph Brown, with music by Bernie Baskin, the role of Elmer Terwilliger, a hillbilly violinist from the Ozarks, was played by Gene Kaza. Other leads were Pat Laws, a newcomer to Mummers this year, Lee Hunziker and Duane Smith.

The officers who correlated the production were Roy Taylor, president; Chloe Hamilton, secretary-treasurer; Hillis Miller, corresponding secretary, and Mary Hoyt, Roger Applebee and Bernie Baskin, members-at-large. In February Bernie Baskin moved up to the presidency, while Jerry Holesovsky filled the member-at-large vacancy.

Organized in 1936, the Mummers Club has always welcomed all student men into its membership and by 1942 had succeeded in establishing itself as an Oberlin tradition. With the combined talents of College and Conservatory men, a musical comedy was written, produced, danced and sung by men each year. Oberlin women aided in the make-up, stage and secretarial work, and in 1943 were allowed to dance in the chorus. Forced to disband in the next year, the club reorganized in 1945 in its present form, with women sharing in the entire production.

INTERNATIONAL

Intercultural organizations work toward better understanding of foreign countries

LIMAXING an impressive Chapel in January, Betty Cameron accepted the 1947 Shansi Fellowship to instruct for three years at the Oberlin-in-China school. Also at this assembly the appointment of Melville Kennedy, Shansi representative for the Class of '38, as director of the Oberlin-Shansi Memorial Association was announced. Anne Parker presided at the chapel.

After the program, at which Mr. Kennedy spoke on "Oberlin-in-China, Postwar Model," Betty Cameron was honored at a special luncheon and a reception in Shipherd Lounge.

The selection of the representative was made by the Student Shansi Committee, composed of two men and women from each class. This committee, which is a part of the Oberlin-Shansi Memorial Association, follows a program designed to keep students informed about Oberlin-in-China activities. Among the events which it sponsors are the Shansi Day (at which time the Fellowship is awarded), the Memorial Arch Service in the spring, and the Shansi Breakfast during Commencement Week. The committee also cooperates with the China Club in bringing outstanding speakers on China to the campus.

In keeping with the aims of its program, the Shansi Committee, under the leadership of Kent Martling, social chairman, sponsored a China Rec in November. Festivities included a Chinese dinner served in freshman dining halls at which chopsticks were used. Waiters appeared attired in coolie hats.

At the initial YMCA open forum of the year, Melville Kennedy and Herb Van Meter, also a former Shansi representative, led a discussion on the topic, "China Divided."

As a contribution to the work of the CRD, the Shansi Committee sponsored an auction of articles made by Chinese women at the school in Shansi.

Bob Friedrichs and Janet Knapp are present Oberlin reps in Shansi.

Directing the work of the committee were its officers: Betty Cameron, chairman; Anne Parker, vice-chairman; Mary Jo Clark, secretary, and Betty Kullman, publicity.

WORKING to eliminate the conception of China which considers it a land of pagodas, dragons, and exotic dreams, the program of this year's China Club was directed toward creating a picture of the real China: its problems, traditions, and contributions to Western culture.

The club was started in 1934 by a returned Shansi rep, Betty James Irwin, '32, and aimed to arouse student interest in China, to cooperate with the Shansi Committee, and to serve as a medium whereby Chinese students here could share their experiences with American students.

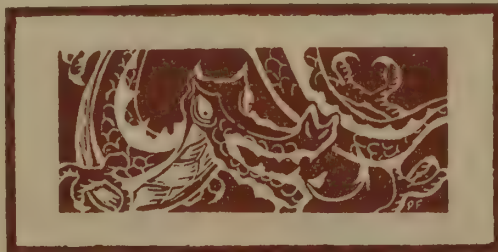

Supplementing the student talks at regular monthly meetings, the club heard interesting programs by such speakers as Liu Liang-Mo, the founder of China's Mass Singing Movement, and Major Patrick Li, who studied in Oberlin this year.

Planning the meetings were Millie Y. L. Quon, president, and Mary Jo Clark, program chairman, assisted by Charlotte Trewin, secretary; Donald Willmott, treasurer; Doris Temme, social chairman, and Nancy McCombs, publicity chairman.

THE TEMPO of living in foreign countries as reported by students and faculty has been the central theme of the Cosmopolitan Club meetings. Opening the year's program at the home of Dean Edward F. Bosworth, Mrs. Wolfgang Stechow related her impressions of life, using those of Ernst Weichert, the German poet, to illustrate her points.

The trials and tribulations of a Danish princess upon her arrival at the immigrant offices in America were humorously related by Mrs. Axel Skjerne when she addressed the group. As a member of the Hoover Food Commission, Professor John B. Mason spoke from a position of authority about relief and rehabilitation work in Europe, and, more specifically, in Austria where he was stationed. Mrs. Howard Robinson, who has spent many vacations with her husband visiting England, opened the second semester with a thumbnail sketch of the customs and habits of the British.

Planning the programs, refreshments, and social activities of the Cosmo Club were president Marjoy Moser, vice-president Marie Walter, secretary Helen Kenmore, treasurer Arthur Christofersen, and publicity chairman Gordon Liddle. Active in plans for organizing the UNESCO group in Oberlin was John Ultmann, Cosmo Club representative to the UNESCO Committee.

EMPHASIS was placed upon music, drama, art and social-political problems of France by the French Club through the year. Members of the organization were divided into various teams, each presenting programs in its special field.

Highlight of the semester was Frank Schork's art tour of Paris in which he showed slides of the Parisian artistic world. Planned by the music team was the program of group singing and the solos of Martha Talbot, alto; Arnold Messner, tenor, and Rita Seeley, pianist. To spice the Christmas season, Martha Kissane, Roland Siebens, Michel Bloch and Dorothy Downing presented a humorous story of Alphonse Daudet's "Les Trois Messes Basses." An impromptu pre-exam program featured Le Fontaine's fable, "Le Corbeau et Le Renard" in which Martha Kissane performed the gestures while Dorothy Downing recited. Records of Charles Trenet also helped to alleviate examination strain.

Officers of the French Club, Dorothy Downing, president; Roland Siebens, vice-president; Harriet Peebles, secretary, and Frank Schork, treasurer, led the group with the aid of adviser, Mme. Albertine Humphries.

HIGHLIGHTING the year's program of "El Circulo Espanol," the Spanish Club, was a Fiesta Dance in January which featured Spanish records and Iberian costumes.

George Haley presided over the group which enjoyed a larger membership, as it encouraged students in elementary classes to attend meetings to become more familiar with the language. Also heading the organization were officers Dorothy Downing, program chairman; Luella McCalla, treasurer; Cora Montanaro, secretary, and Janet Strasburg, publicity director.

Designed for those interested in Spanish and Spanish-American affairs, the Spanish Club afforded an excellent opportunity for practice in the use of the Spanish language. Its meetings, including business procedures, were conducted in Spanish, while its constitution, which was drawn up by members, was written in Spanish.

Programs of the club varied in nature. They included talks by native Spaniards, plays presented by club members, musical recitals, films, lantern slides, exhibitions, games, celebrations of Spanish holidays, observance of customs of the Mediterranean country, and the publication of a Spanish newspaper for the students.

LIT SOCIETIES

Four women's lit societies relate study to fields of humanities, history, science

TRESSING the inter-relationship of literature with other fields of knowledge and experience, the program of the Aelioian Literary Society included talks and discussions by members of the faculty in the social sciences, physical sciences and humanities who discussed the effectiveness of literary expression in their particular fields.

Dr. Clarence Ward of the Fine Arts Department opened this series with an illustrated lecture about literature in sculpture and stained glass.

In addition to evening meetings devoted to the main theme for the year, informal programs of recorded American folk music, poetry and Shakespearean excerpts were presented. Highlighting the Christmas banquet was a dramatic reading of a Christmas story by Elinor Josephson.

Engaged in guiding the activities of the group and aiding with plans for the inter-society dance and banquet were Nancy Guest, president; Helen Adam, vice-president; Marguerite Seeley, secretary; Nancy Thiele, corresponding secretary; Edith Cripe, treasurer, and Marjorie Losch, social chairman.

EENTERING their program about the theme, "Techniques Used in American Literature," the Ladies Literary Society heard faculty speakers and society members develop various phases of this topic. Professors Paul B. Sears, Robert S. Fletcher, Chester L. Shaver and J. Jeffery Auer covered those fields of American literature which were best known to them. Creative work of society members was used to supplement the programs.

Mrs. William E. Stevenson's recounting of her overseas experiences and a talk by Mrs. Ruth Lampson highlighted inter-society activities.

Responsible for the annual Christmas dinner and for the spring L.L.S. alumnae meeting were officers Margaret Scheldrup, president; Eleanor Woelfel and Pat Hostetter, secretaries; Audrey Nelson, treasurer; Edith Schweser, program chairman, and Mary K. Bonsteel, social chairman.

CONTINUING in the traditions of the literary societies, Phi Alpha Phi has introduced to its members the new, and many of the older trends in prose, poetry, drama and the arts. In its forty-fifth year, this society has turned to the original system developed by the founding mothers, that of utilizing the talents of members in reporting upon developments in these fields, with less dependence upon outside speakers than has been the case in the past.

Interest in social activities and those of the inter-literary group has run high. A Christmas party, a jaunt to Cleveland to enjoy the arts of the theater, and the customary Love Feast, a banquet held by the upperclass women of the society for the graduating seniors, added to the festive side of Phi Alpha Phi's program. Planned by the social chairmen from the four societies and Miss Katharine von Wenck were the annual dance, a tea for the introduction to freshmen of the functions of the societies, and the spring banquet, in which all four literary groups had an opportunity to exchange ideas and talents.

At the helm of the society were president Eleanor Rinehart, vice-president Kathryn Campbell, program chairman Rachel Ross, social chairman Nana Bragg, treasurer Annabelle Flitcraft, and secretary Nancy Edwards.

THOUGH limited by a small membership, Sigma Gamma literary society has accumulated a large reserve of contributions of original prose and and poetry of its members. Aiming to encourage and further any latent literary talents of its membership, Sigma Gamma spent its meetings in the perusal and discussion of the productions of both its members and its faculty guests.

Humor and current issues provided the main topics of the year. In the former category fall the extemporaneous speeches on such topics as the vital importance of billiard balls, and an Oberlin Mother Goose, a parody on the Harvard Mother Goose. Labor and politics consumed the major portion of the debates which were related to current issues.

Aiming to uphold the standards of the society set by Pat Haley's prize-winning poem, "Why Distance?", the society endeavored to produce something of equal worth for the spring banquet. Leading the group were: Joyce Simon, president; Priscilla Haley, secretary-treasurer; Patience Haley, social chairman, and Holley Atkinson, program chairman.

Sigma Gamma participated in the inter-literary activities: the dance, tea, and meeting with Professor Ruth H. Lampson.

PUBLIC AFFAIRS

Forum, Forensic, CPA, Congress Sessions sponsor discussions of current affairs

FUNCTIONING as the coordinating center for current affairs discussions and action groups on the campus, the Forum Board has also promoted an informative program of its own, including two major conferences.

The first conference, held January 9 and 10, covered the general question of United States foreign policy, with special emphasis on relations with Russia, the United Nations and occupied countries.

Four well-known speakers from the field of foreign affairs, Adolph A. Berle, Sarah Wambaugh, Victor A. Yakhontoff, and Major Gerard B. Crook presented their views on these topics.

Chairman Ted Frye, secretaries Pat Long and Nancy Guest, treasurer Glen Mellinger and members Dick Anliot, Helen Lindsley and Stan Rostov did research work on the three main topics. Their results were incorporated into a conference supplement to the Review, edited by publicity chairman Dolores Kremarek. Shirley Atchison planned and directed all conference social activities.

Preceding the conference a faculty panel discussion of United States and the occupied countries was held with John W. Kurtz, John B. Mason, and Harvey K. Goldberg participating.

A later conference in the spring dealt with the problems of labor-management relations.

FORENSIC activities resumed their former place in the extra-curricular program this year with the return of J. Jeffery Auer, head of the public speaking department.

Under the presidency of Tom Dutro, the Oberlin Forensic Union was reestablished in the fall and opened to all students interested in debating, oratory and student congress work.

Emphasis during the first semester was placed upon preparation for the annual Legislative Assembly of the Northeastern Ohio Debate Conference. Ninety representatives from eleven Ohio schools visited Oberlin for the assembly. Dick Flynn, Jim Cook, George Schrock, George Reddin, Marilyn Snyder and Murray Stow made up the committee which worked out plans for the conference.

During the Legislative Assembly, delegates passed bills recommending a federal department of education, addition of an international "Bill of Rights" to the UN Charter, establishment of an FEPC and a report for federal aid to states for setting up state health programs.

Oberlin representatives included Tom Dutro and Jim Smith in the field of labor-management relations; Dick Anliot, United Nations; Nancy Lowell and Nancy Sutton, Medical Care, and Margaret Cooley and Mildred Currier, College Education.

ORGANIZED to inform the campus of the issues involved in national and international situations, to urge students to active participation in discussion of current issues, and to cooperate with other groups interested in similar activities, the Committee for Progressive Action, organized in the spring of 1946, maintained a liberal stand in the field of politics.

Under the leadership of chairman Dolores Kremarek, the group organized its members to bring all voters to the polls in the November elections. The endorsement of a dominantly Democratic ticket brought the group into the political arena when the local Republican committee waged a battle of words in the local newspapers.

Planning the strategy of the committee with chairman Kremarek were secretary Marie Walter, treasurer Jim Cole, and the executive board composed of John Blumgart, Wilfred Iltis, Alice Kross, Martha Redfield, Mark Sherman and Don Willmott.

An "Oust Bilbo" campaign was the group's first project. Tables were set up in Peters Court giving students the opportunity to write to their Congressmen in an effort to carry to them the opinions of their constituents.

Standing committees of the CPA have such tasks as research on current problems, the publishing of a bulletin and the maintenance of a news board in Peters Court in order to spread the efforts of the committee to the student body.

LANNING Student Congresses and related setup sessions, the Student Congress Planning Board under the leadership of Stan Rostov organized open meetings on topics of campus, national and international interest.

To determine the stand of students concerning the resolution, "Resolved, that Russian foreign policies are compatible with Western foreign policies in the formulation of world peace," Art Hoffman, affirmative, and John Hopkins, negative, debated the issue before the opening congress. Covering such issues as Russian territorial aims, her United Nations policies in regard to veto power, disarmament, and the atom bomb, the Congress decided that the United States and Russia could promote cooperation if foreign policy ideas expressed by Henry Wallace were adopted.

Working with Rostov on the Planning Board were the agenda committee: Mark Sherman, Wiley Bucey, Jim Cole and Hedy Merten; the publicity committee: Joan McCabe, Barbara King, Murray Stow, Joanne Benton and Janet Toohy, and the set-up session committee: Peter Gettinger, Peter Gregg and Emil Abramovic. Forum Board advisors Professors John D. Lewis and John B. Mason led the set-up session prior to the initial Congress.

CONFERENCES

Men, women discuss future occupations; religious meetings stress social action

AFTER a five year period during which occupations for men were rather forcefully predetermined, the YMCA, with the cooperation of the Bureau of Appointments and the Admissions Office brought 47 consultants to confer with students for the Men's Career Conference, December 12 and 13.

Bill Bosworth acted as chairman of the Conference Cabinet which planned the opening chapel program, afternoon sectional meetings, evening round table discussions and bull sessions, and interviews with consultants the following morning. Assisting on this committee were Jim Clark, assistant chairman; Duane Smith, treasurer, and Al Ficken, secretary.

Eight sub-committees were appointed to aid in conference details. These were headed by Bob Axtmann, Dick Weekes, Stan Rostov, John Bassett, Bill Girouard, Wes Simon, Glen Mellinger and John Fairfield. Serving as faculty advisers were

William H. Seaman, Director of Admissions; Robert Rankin, Secretary of the YMCA; Edward F. Bosworth, Dean of Men; Thomas E. Harris, Alumni Secretary; Dean Holdeman, Assistant Director of Admissions; and John C. Kennedy, Assistant Director of the Conservatory.

Keynoting the Conference, Thomas S. Matthews, Managing Editor of Time Magazine, gave some timely advice on job-hunting. At this opening session at which Bill Bosworth presided, John E. Gurney, bass soloist of the Metropolitan Opera Company, sang several selections.

The program of the Conference covered five broad fields of interest: business, science and health, social administration, law and journalism, education, and music. During the five afternoon meetings, specialists in these groups outlined interesting aspects of their professions. At the bull sessions, round table groups, and during the personal interviews, individual problems were discussed.

President Stevenson greeted the consultants at a dinner in Talcott Hall on the evening of the first day of the Conference.

PLANNED as the major activity of the Women's Self-Government League for the year, the Women's Symposium under the chairmanship of Betty Kullman presented more than 40 women from varied fields to address and confer with women of the College. The Symposium meetings began on February 24 and continued over the following three Mondays.

Assisting Betty Kullman on the Planning Board were Jean Porter, Ellen Levin and Barbara Bradley, while Miss Muriel Specht, Dean Marguerite Woodworth, Miss Dorothy Smith, John C. Kennedy, Miss Katherine von Wenck and Miss Gladys Moore served as faculty advisers.

The four all-day sessions were classified by topic into four groups. Initial discussions covered education and business, while humanities and music, social sciences, and physical and biological sciences were the subjects for the final three days, respectively. Student chairmen for these Monday groups were Pat Wood, Betty Cameron, Helen Adam, Nancy Jones and Katherine Mackey.

Addressing the Symposium at the opening meeting was Dr. Margaret Barnard Pickel, Dean of University Women at the University of Columbia, while other speakers included President Dorothy Bell of Bradford Junior College, Alice Williams Barns, Personnel Director of Time Magazine, Bell Greve of Western Reserve University, and Mrs. Elwood Street, nationally known marriage counselor.

EMPHASIZING the necessity of placing Christian principles into practice in daily life, the annual Religious Conference, sponsored by the Y's, heard Dr. Henry Hitt Crane, pastor of the Central Methodist Church in Detroit, in a series of formal addresses, informal discussions, and bull sessions, March 11 and 12.

The Religious Conference Committee, led by Barbara Bradley and Chuck Hubbell, worked out all plans for the meetings, aided by the Religious Interests Committee of which Dean Thomas W. Graham is chairman.

Others serving on the Conference Committee were Channing Jeschke, program; Herbert Jenkins, preparations and bull sessions; Martha Buchman, social; Margaret Campbell, secretary, and Jane Klein, acting adviser.

Methods of exerting the influence of the church upon community and national activities and for bringing about positive social action were discussed during the meetings.

The Conference was concluded with a Vesper Service led by Dr. Crane.

EDUCATION

*FTA schedules field trips, talks, banquet;
ACE organizes activities for KP majors*

FOLLOWING the nation-wide interest in the improvement of educational systems, the Oberlin chapter of the Future Teachers of America inaugurated an active training program that swelled its membership to 87 members.

Sponsored by the F. T. A., the annual Education Banquet on February 28 drew members of nearby F. T. A. chapters, public school and college instructors. Dr. Harold G. Shane, superintendent of the famous Winnetka, Illinois, school system, was the guest speaker.

At one meeting, Hal Peterson acted as the "guinea pig" in a mock personal interview with Superintendent John Luttrell of the Lorain Public Schools. A special agent of the Ohio Education Association, Harold S. Vincent, conducted a program on March 18.

The Chapter, sponsored by Professor Roger M. Shaw, was represented by Ed Heilakka, president; Betty Detweiler, vice-president; Jean Williams, secretary-treasurer; Mary Lou Enigson, social chairman; Amy Lou Millonig, music chairman, and Joyce Bestwick, librarian.

RICHARD Kindergarten provided the setting for the first supper of the Association for Childhood Education at which former members then teaching in Oberlin were guests. At this meeting, the A. C. E. began its year of monthly discussions, social, and study sessions.

Plans for the year under the leadership of Evelyn Cooper as president; Carolyn MacDaniels, secretary; Mary Jane Dunn, treasurer; Marian Kohn, social chairman, and Gloria Wise and Maribelle Powell, members-at-large, included a November meeting to make Christmas presents—mittens, stuffed animals, and scrapbooks—for the Children's Home, and a Christmas party with prospective Kindergarten-Primary majors.

Later Mr. Seaman led a discussion on "job-getting," and in the spring Emeritus Professor Florence M. Fitch spoke on religious education. Study meetings to review children's phonograph records and films included discussions concerning their use with children.

Professors Mary S. Yocom and Marie Rankin advised the group of future kindergarten-primary teachers.

RELIEF DRIVE

Consolidated Relief Drive aims at $15,000 in campaign to aid private relief agencies

ESTABLISHED in 1941 as a part of the Collegiate Service Organization, the Consolidated Relief Drive has outlived the war years in continuing to contribute funds to private relief societies.

Under the chairmanship of Anne Parker, the CRD set the highest goal in its history, $15,000, most of which was subscribed during an intensive four-day canvass of all students early in December. The drive was inaugurated by Mrs. William E. Stevenson in an address in Finney Chapel, and was carried on under the slogan, "Wake Up and Give."

In addition to individual subscriptions, further aid was received from proceeds from the CRD Variety Show, the CRD Carnival, the Charity Ball, the Share-a-Meal plan, and from the sale of colors by the Boosters Club.

A burlesque on "Hamlet" written by Henry Wardle, coupled with musical and specialty numbers, highlighted the CRD Variety Show. Dick Vincent, playing the lead role in the production, Alan Joseph, delivering an effective pantomime of a popular Danny Kaye song, and Jodora McIntosh, singing a song of her own composition, were featured performers.

The Reconstruction Relief Committee, a subcommittee of the CRD headed by Dick Anliot, incited wide campus interest in the Share-a-Meal plan. After a Student Congress session at which Henry Yaker opposed the plan which Anliot had outlined, students voted 1309 to 299 to continue the Tuesday rationed meal.

As a result of these activities, the CRD was able to aid the American Friends Service Committee, the Phillis Wheatley Center, United Service to China, Unitarian Service, World Students Service Fund, and the American Red Cross.

THE publicizing of all-college social events and the arousing of school spirit was the purpose of the Boosters Club which experienced its greatest activity during the football season. Bonfires, pep rallies, making and selling "colors" for football games, and painting posters constituted much of its work. The publication of the weekly "What's Cookin'" bulletin and regular publicity for the Recreation Committee and other organizations kept the group active during the remainder of the year.

Chairman Nancy McCurdy and secretary Joyce Orr headed the group, while the committees were directed by: Betty Detweiler, "What's Cookin'," Pat and Pris Haley, posters; Ann Bonar, dining hall announcements, and Steve Ely, preparations.

REARCHING the intricacies of various aspects of its field, the Mathematics Club arranged a series of talks by its student members which covered such topics as "The Mobius Strip," "Non-Euclidean Geometries," "The Fourth Dimension," and "Occupations Open to Mathematics Majors."

In addition to the bi-weekly business meetings, following which student dissertations were presented, a Christmas party at the home of Professor Robert W. Wagner, faculty sponsor, and the annual spring banquet comprised the club's program.

Charlotte Peters, president; Frank Marzocco, vice-president; Ruth Berger, secretary-treasurer; Artha Jean Burington, social chairman, and Rosalind Monastersky, publicity chairman, were officers of the group.

Football, a representative Oberlin sport

A T H L E T I C S

Returning veterans, former Unit men dominate Yeoman athletic squads; swimming team excels bulwarks of the athletic teams, the invincible squads of the three previous years, with one notable exception, became a thing of the past. Only in swimming did the Yeomen withstand all comers, while varying degrees of success marked their records in other sports.

This change was neither unexpected nor disappointing. Oberlin puts much emphasis on the winning of as many contests as possible, but does not go out of its way to admit students primarily on the basis of athletic ability. The only athletic scholarship which the College offers, the four-year Glen Gray award, requires an outstanding academic record in addition to participation in athletics. Not granted during the war years, this scholarship was resumed for the Class of 1950 and was awarded to Robert Burns, who lettered in football and played on the basketball squad.

Noticeable during the year was an increased spectator interest in all sports. The grandstand at Dill Field was so crowded for football games that the bands were moved across the field to temporary bleachers. Despite the fact that the Athletic Department policy of reserving

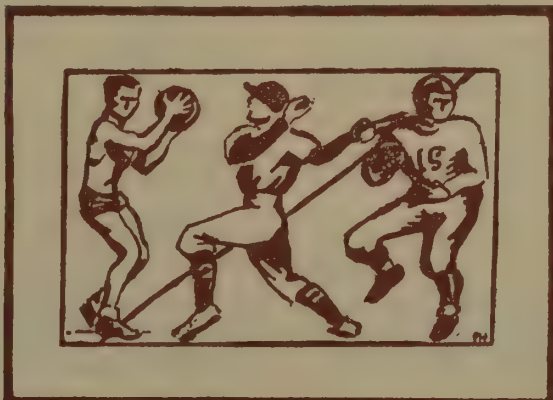

ITH the departure of the Navy and Marine Units in February, 1946, Oberlin athletic squads returned to a somewhat more typical status. Though several former Unit men returned to join pre-war students as seats was abandoned at the beginning of the basketball season, there was seldom more than standing room available at every game. The gallery of Crane Pool was filled to capacity at every swimming meet. Other sports also enjoyed their quota of enthusiastic fans.

The sports year 1946-'47 featured many sparkling group and individual performances. Freshman Bruce Kinsey broke several records as he led the Yeoman swimming team to an undefeated season. Phil Thomas paced the conference champion cross country squad, which lost only to powerful Miami. Bill Dipman, letter-winner in three sports before the war, returned to captain both the baseball and football teams. Although both were injured during parts of the season, tackles Bob Keeseey and Dick McGinnis spearheaded the football line. Bob Friedrichs, captain of the track team, was responsible for many of the tracksters' points in the hurdle and broad jump events.

Nonetheless it was team efforts that were most significant during the year. After dropping two games early in the season, the football team finished strongly with a decisive 23-0 triumph over Wooster, its traditional rival. Coach Bob Clark's basketballers consistently faced taller opponents, but exhibited an inspiring "never-say-die" spirit.

We have witnessed the spirit of unity in other phases of Oberlin life. Such a spirit is especially evident in sports, where co-operation is vital to the welfare of the team, and it has fortunately been a striking characteristic of 1947 Oberlin sports.

G O L F

Handicapped by inexperience, golf squad tallies only two victories in eleven matches

ALTHOUGH considerable improvement was observed in the course of the season, an inexperienced Yeoman golf team was able to win only two victories and take one tie in its eleven matches.

After bowing to Wooster and Denison, Coach Hayden Boyers' team approached winning form as they tied Akron, 8-8. The Yeomen then turned the next two home matches into victories by downing John Carroll and Ohio Northern. Captain Don Becker and Bob Collins each recorded four points, while Johnny Strong and Collins took a half point apiece to account for the 9-7 triumph over Carroll. Against Ohio Northern, Strong tallied four points, Collins three, and Becker and Les Humphries two each to provide the 11-5 winning margin.

Playing in the Conference Match at Wooster, Becker tied for sixth place with an 80, only three points behind the winning score of 77.

T E N N I S

Spring tennis team divides its schedule, overcomes six opponents in twelve matches

THE tennis team proved to be the only spring sport team to break even on its schedule, winning six out of its twelve matches. Three lettermen, Shelly Wolin, Pratt Byrd, and David King, teamed up with newcomers Russ DeValois, Ed Van Metre, Art Tenney, and Johnny Rupp, to form the squad.

Opening at Muskingum, the courtmen triumphed 6-1, winning all but one of their singles matches. Following this, the Yeomen lost to powerful teams from Cincinnati, Wayne, and Kenyon, losing 8-1, 9-0, and 5-4 respectively.

Sparked by Wolin's 6-3, 7-5, win over the Bowling Green number one man, the netters went on to spank the Bee Gees, 8-1. Playing their best tennis of the season, the Yeomen defeated Bowling Green in a second encounter, losing only the number three doubles contest.

Byrd and Van Metre were the only Yeomen who could stop Ohio State's netters, as they both won their singles matches and later teamed up in a successful doubles combination although the Buckeyes triumphed, 4-3.

The Yeomen then finished their season by winning three out of their last four contests, as they downed Allegheny, Ohio Wesleyan, and Western Reserve while losing only to Case. In the Conference meet, Wolin advanced to the semi-finals.

Baseball season marked by 18-inning game; spring and summer teams both win four HIGHLIGHT of the spring baseball season was the eighteen inning game with Toledo, longest contest in the history of Oberlin baseball. First-baseman Friar Tuck doubled to right field with a man on second to drive in the run needed for a 6-5 victory. Captain Bill Dipman turned in the top hurling performance of the season in this game by allowing only one run in the twelve innings that he pitched.

For the season as a whole, Coach Guy Throner's team turned in a record of four wins against nine setbacks.

Most of the members of the spring team also played on the summer team, reinforced by the return to school of pitchers Friedl Anders and Bob Houser, catcher Gene Scott, and outfielder Pat Cavanaugh.

Playing against tough industrial teams, the diamondmen won four, tied two, and lost three.

In the final game of the season the Yeomen came from behind to defeat the national amateur baseball champions, the Akron Orphans, in a 3-2 contest behind the tight hurling of Friedl Anders.

Shortstop Ralph Gunschel led the summer nine in batting with a .433 average, while his partner around second base, Jimmy Bly, was manager.

Track team takes two out of six events; beats Carnegie Tech, wins five-team meet

WITH only three lettermen returning, Coach Dan Kinsey had the smallest nucleus for his track team in years. A lack of depth proved to be the chief handicap to the thinclads, as they won two out of six meets.

The fundamental lack of balance was never more obvious than in the first meet of the season, when the Kinseymen faced Case and Baldwin-Wallace in a triangular affair. Despite the fact that the Yeomen took seven firsts and seconds, they were a poor third with 39 points. Captain Bob Friedrichs stood out, as he won the low and high hurdles and the broad jump. Bill Robertson snared the discus for the Yeomen.

The next encounter proved to be the most lopsided of the season as the power-laden Miami track squad toppled the Yeomen, 130-26.

Earl Lowell won the two-mile, Bob Walton took the broad jump, and Friedrichs captured the hurdles, but an Ohio Wesleyan team proved to be too strong for the thinclads and the local team bowed, 92-35.

For the first time during the season, the all-important second and third places were captured by the Yeomen as Oberlin downed Carnegie Tech, 65-57, in a meet at Pittsburgh. Walton, Robertson, Lowell, and Friedrichs captured first places for Oberlin.

Coach Kinsey's team won a five-team meet from Wooster, Mount Union, Denison, and Ashland, by taking 23 points in the last three events to triumph with 50 points. Friedrichs won twice, Hempy triumphed in the broad jump, while the 880-yard relay provided the only other first for the Yeomen.

In a tune-up for the Conference meet, the Akron Zippers nosed out the Yeomen, 68-59, with the outcome in doubt until the Akron mile relay team triumphed in the final event of the afternoon.

The Ohio Conference meet, held in Oberlin on June 1, proved to be a field day for Baldwin-Wallace. The Yeomen, who finished sixth behind Baldwin-Wallace, Toledo, Akron, Case, and Otterbein, garnered only 14 points. Friedrichs took seven of these by finishing third in the broad jump, and fourth in both low and high hurdles.

CROSS COUNTRY

Ohio Conference championship, five wins mark successful cross country season

PLACED by freshman Phil Thomas, the cross country team captured the Ohio Conference championship as well as winning five out of their seven dual meets.

After dropping their first meet of the season to Ohio Wesleyan by a narrow margin, the harriers downed Case, Baldwin-Wallace, and Bowling Green on successive Saturdays. Thomas took first place in all three of these victories, while Captain Roy Knipper and lettermen Earl Lowell and Tom Althouse were among the leaders.

In the Conference meet, Thomas put on a terrific sprint to nose out Churchill of Case by four-tenths of a second. Another freshman who had been improving all season, Dick Walker, took fifth place in the Conference, with Lowell, Knipper, and Althouse coming in right on his heels.

Thomas led the runners across the finish as Oberlin swamped Wooster to end the season.

Soccer team downs prepsters, colleges to chalk up five victories in '46 season

THE soccer schedule may be almost considered as two separate seasons: the first, in which the booters played the local prep school teams; the second, in which the Yeomen competed against other colleges.

Opening against Western Reserve Academy, Coach George Willbond's team topped the prepsters, 2-1, as Bud Felch scored twice for the Yeomen. Felch again scored the only goal in the next game, as the booters nosed out University School, 1-0, with Goalie Mac White getting credit for a shutout.

In their return game with University School, the Yeoman forward wall proved unstoppable, winning by a 6-0 score. Don Illig, Jim Gottshall, Captain Russ DeValois, Johnny Maurice, and Felch were the offensive stars of this game, while Pat Catling stood out on the defense. Western Reserve won the second game from the Yeomen, 2-1, by knocking in a goal in the final quarter to break a one-all tie.

The team then beat Allegheny, 2-0, and held powerful Slippery Rock to a scoreless tie. In their finale, the booters downed Carnegie Tech, 1-0, to finish the season with a record of five victories, two losses, and one tie. Hudd Targart scored the only goal in this contest.

Yeoman eleven plays powerhouse football, winning four, losing two, and tying one URING a season marked by top-flight football, Oberlin's eleven more than held its own as the Yeomen gridders compiled a record of four wins, two losses, and one tie. After an erratic beginning, Coach Lysle Butler's team developed into a powerhouse before the season was over.

Opening their season at Forbes Field, Pittsburgh, on a muddy, rainy day, the Yeomen trampled over Carnegie Tech, 25-0. Oberlin had the game under control within five minutes of play when star halfback Bill Dipman passed to Bob Addison who scampered over the goal.

Before the largest home crowd in years, Coach Butler's team held a powerful Ohio Wesleyan eleven at bay for three quarters, but in the final stanza, the Bishops scored twice to win, 13-0.

Scoring twice in the second and once in the third quarter, the Yeomen won their Homecoming game from Denison, 19-12. After the Big Red had gone ahead with a touchdown in the opening quarter, Dipman scored for Oberlin in the second stanza by breaking through the line on a beautiful 33-yard jaunt to hit pay-dirt. A few minutes later with the Yeomen in possession of the ball on the Denison 21-yard stripe, Dipman passed to Addison to put the Crimson and Gold ahead, 12-6. In the final period, Addison recovered a fumble in the Denison end zone to bring the total to 19.

Against a favored Bowling Green eleven, the Yeomen drove four times to within the four-yard line, but were unable to score as the Bee-Gees won on their home field, 14-0. Fullback Tank Hewitt, quarterback Don Campbell, end Sy Kosanovich, center Johnny Zimmerman, and guards Art Hirsch, Joe Schneider, and Dick Biringer stood out for the Yeomen.

On a chilly wind-swept field at Greencastle, Indiana, the Yeomen battled DePauw to a 7-7 tie. Scoring in the first few minutes of play on a pass from Campbell to Pat Cavanaugh, the Oberlin gridders were ahead for most of the game. Tackle Dan Becker was the defensive star for the Yeomen in this clash, while Bill Drake turned in his best game of the year as fullback.

The following week the Yeomen rolled over a weak Allegheny eleven, 62-0, scoring at will in every period.

In the last game of the season, the gridders downed a powerful Wooster team, 23-0. Dipman, who was elected season's captain before this contest, halfback Friar Tuck, and end Don Mullen finished out their college careers with outstanding performances. Touchdowns by Weaver, Campbell, and Johnson, a field goal by Addison, and extra points by Dipman and Addison swelled the total to 23, as the Yeomen finished their season on a triumphal note.

BASKETBALL

Basketballers lose 11 of 16 encounters; eight lettermen will return next year

ESPITE high pre-season hopes, the 1946-1947 basketball season proved a disappointment as the cagers won but five of their sixteen tilts, dropping the last six in a row.

Four of the five regulars were lettermen: Captain Bill Tuck at forward, Howie Helfrich at center, and Pat Cavanaugh and Bob Addison in the guard positions. Freshman Phil Thomas was the only newcomer to break into the starting line-up. Veteran Johnny Zimmerman moved into the starting five when Addison left school after the first semester.

While their record was not imposing, the Yeomen were not without their strong points. Helfrich for his snaring of rebounds, Tuck's passing and floor play, and the work of Cavanaugh, Addison, and Jack Frost on the defense were all deserving of mention, while Zimmerman, Thomas, and Johnny Strong often provided the offense spark for the team.

One of the brightest sides of the season is that lettermen Cavanaugh, Thomas, Helfrich, Frost, Harry Howes, Kent Miller, Carter Donohoe, and Ben Lancashire will give the Yeomen a group of eight men around which to build next year's combination.

SWIMMING

Freshman Bruce Kinsey leads Yeomen to best season in Oberlin history of sport

FOR the Yeomen swimmers, the 1946-1947 season proved to be the most successful in the sixteen years of the sport in Oberlin. Following successive victories over Fenn, Wooster, Muskingum, Baldwin-Wallace, Ohio Wesleyan, Case, Chicago, Kenyon, Carnegie Tech, Rochester, and both B-W and Wooster in return meets, the mer-men copped the Ohio Conference crown.

Like most champion swimming teams, Coach Dan Kinsey's squad combined an array of top-flight performers with a well-balanced squad. Freshman Bruce Kinsey, who was one of the leading point-getters all season, set two new school marks, as he cut the 220-yard freestyle mark to 2:22.0 and the 150-yard back stroke record to 1:44.3. In addition, the 400-yard freestyle relay combination of Hal Wright, Captain Jack Bradshaw, Dick Weekes, and Kinsey set a new school record of 3:53.8.

Consistent point-winners in the freestyle events were Dick Burket, who set a new Crane Pool record in the 440, Bill Girouard, Captain Bradshaw, Neal Hinrichs, Bob Masters, Bob Teeters, Wright, Kinsey, and Weekes. Bob Hillery was the leading backstroker in most of the meets, with support from Paul Carrick and Kinsey.

Art Rasch, Dave Cronon, and Dave Chesler took care of the breaststroke for the Yeomen. Veterans Bill Robertson, Howie Curtis, and sophomore Al Fink successfully handled the diving.

FENCING

Fencers return to action but fail to win in five matches; Krauss is lone veteran

FENCING returned to the field of intercollegiate competition this year. As Captain Bob Krauss was the only experienced man on the squad, Coach Paul Arnold's green team dropped all five of its meets.

With lettermen Don Taub, Keith Young, Henry Friedlander, Doug Ewen, and Krauss graduating, Coach Arnold will have five veterans back for next year's team, including the epee trio of Wally Brasen, Dale Race, and John Stephan; Dave Weimer in the saber; and Rod Snedeker in the foil.

WOMEN'S SPORTS

Princeton victory in traditional contest climaxes active year in women's sports

LOOKING back on this year at Oberlin, the time spent in sports comes to assume significance as an important phase of undergrad life. The fun of hard play, the friendships made, and the sense of comradeship that comes from team sports stand out in particular.

Spring sports in '46 began with volleyball. Those who played on house teams remember the gym floor swarming with people during practices, and the terrific inter-league playoff game when Shurtleff finally beat Arnold's by a score of 31 to 30 in a five minute overtime period. The class players recall the senior team, Class of '46, winning their first championship, and Class of '47 taking second place for the first time in three years. Then followed the night of the All-Star games when the Why's beat the Wherefore's by a score of 38 to 30, and Mary Holmes' Gold team beat the Crimson, captained by Ann Walls, by a score of 23 to 20.

Later in the spring women invaded Galpin Field from lab, libe and dorm, and piled off bicycles for house baseball practices. Ellis-Johnson won the plaque by nosing out Keep-Baldwin in an exciting game. The All-Star Bars beat the All-Star Stars in a 5 to 2 game.

The tennis tournament was won by Jackie Cole, who was also the Freshman champion. Bambi Menzi was the Sophomore champion, and Eleanor Letts was the Junior class champion and runner-up in the all-college tournament.

Warmer weather also found the archers turning out. An all-college meet was run off and eight archers shot on a team in the Intercollegiate Archery Telegraphic Meet with the result that Oberlin placed sixteenth nationally. Tank won the novelty house meet.

Mary Louise Graham was the winner of the golf tournament.

The fall of '46 brought strenuous hockey practices to Galpin Field. The Juniors, class of '48, fought out a close battle with the Sophomores and finally topped them to win their first championship. The All-Star game was played on a beautiful Saturday that followed a week of rain and sporadic soggy practices. Although the two teams were very evenly matched, good fortune was with the Army team, captained by Ruth Hise, and Ellen Llewellyn's Navy players were able to chalk up but 2 goals to Army's 5.

Early in the winter Crane Pool was the scene of the House Marathon competition among all Women's dorms. The Barrows girls swam a total of 1178 "miles" to win the race, while Arnold's followed close behind with 1078 "miles".

Then came winter and the basketball season, marked by cold windy treks to Hales across the twilight or moonlit snow, and best of all, a wonderful Y-P evening. In the class basketball tournament, the Juniors again found themselves in close competition with a strong Sophomore team. The regular season ended in a tie between the two, but the Juniors edged ahead to take the championship by defeating the Sophomores in a special playoff game. The Shurtleff team won the house championship by defeating Tank in a very close game. The So-What All-Star team took a 24 to 20 win from the So-Whiches.

The season ended with the traditional all-women's Yale-Princeton game. Marge Graham did a seemingly effortless job of arranging a wonderful and significant program. Spectators arrived at the gym after an early supper and saw the lone male intruder discovered and put out. Then came the tense and exciting dorm song contest, won by Talcott's "Whirling Wheels" with Gables' "Cherished Memories" taking second place and May Cottage's "Ride Around Oberlin" receiving third place. The team captains, M. B. Yeend of Yale and Gennet Maxon of Princeton, could well be proud of the fine playing done by their teams. Yale moved ahead in the early part of the game, but Princeton settled down after the half and kept a constant lead to win by a score of 32 to 22. With voices somewhat hoarse from cheering, women tore down the gym decorations and turned homeward, planning to renew locker room friendships at the next week's annual Winter Sports Banquet.

Principles which guided founders of Oberlin remain to influence students of later years

ORE than 2100 students from 46 states and 16 foreign countries comprised the Oberlin enrollment for 1947. It is not unusual in Oberlin, to be sure, that a group with such widely differing backgrounds and varied interests should be able to pursue a common educational purpose in harmony. But in an age when discrimination and prejudice have become dangers to a world peace which is increasingly necessary, it is proper to inquire how Oberlin has managed to minimize these dangers.

Dr. Ferdinand M. Isserman, Rabbi of Temple Israel in St. Louis, emphasized this very problem in a Chapel during Brotherhood Week when he stated, "Whereas in other eras brotherhood among peoples was a question of moral choice, in the atomic age it has become one of the imperative necessities."

The ideas of toleration and brotherhood were guiding principles 114 years ago, when Oberlin was founded. Descriptive bulletins about the College have long emphasized "although never a denominational college, Oberlin has always been an avowedly Christian one."

The very evidence of its continued existence indicates that this influence, possibly more than any other, has enabled students of all races, religions and creeds to live on an equal basis in a comparatively free community.

A working example of this tolerance, which extends to student pranks as well as to student ideals, was offered in the Administration's reaction to an incident which will probably outlive memories of football games and eight o'clock classes in the minds of most readers. Sunday morning, January 19, students gazed with mixed feelings at the unmistakable hammer and sickle emblazoned upon a red flag strung in a rather permanent manner atop the flagpole on Tappan Square. For three days the Soviet flag flew over Oberlin, providing material for both local and national news agencies. President Stevenson expressed the attitude of the Administration at Chapel the following Tuesday when he jested, "We need no 'bombs bursting in air' to tell us that 'the flag is still there.'" At the same time he deplored the expense necessary to retrieve the ensign. One student, in a letter to the Review, jokingly blamed the local police for failing to prevent the incident.

The Review summed up campus opinion when it stated in its editorial column: "It is unfortunate that the College's more constructive activities do not receive similar attention, but it is always the unusual, the humorous, the disastrous, or the anomalous that make exciting and interesting news. . . . There is almost certainly no political significance in the deed. It was merely another prank, perhaps a little silly, not very harmful. Many like it have gone before and many like it will follow."

Of such a nature was the year 1946-'47 in Oberlin. Woven together into a living, changing pattern, tolerance and understanding mixed with learning and labor, forming a background for studies, extra-curricular activities, sports events, social programs, and only one "red flag incident."

There are many groups to whom credit is due for the successful completion of a project such as a college annual. The 1947 Hi-O-Hi is no exception and at this point, the Business Staff wishes to express its thanks to the advertisers. Their cooperation and good will are an integral part of this book as well as of the every-day life of every student, faculty member and administrator of Oberlin College. New students have occasion to meet Oberlin business before they become acquainted with most other segments of college life. This association, in many cases, ripens into true friendship within the next four years and helps to make a four-year stay at Oberlin a pleasant one. In keeping with this spirit, the Business Staff urges the Oberlin family to patronize the Hi-O-Hi advertisers.

In your future plans,
keep this in mind—
"There is no substitute for a savings account."

The Staff also wishes to express their appreciation to the following persons for the aid they have given in helping to make the 1947 HI-O-HI a success:

Mr. C. Gordon Brightman and Mr. James V. Oldham of the Jahn & Ollier Engraving Company

Mr. Lester O. Kisabeth of the Gray Printing Company

Mr. Kenneth G. Cooley of the S. K. Smith Company

Mr. Andrew Stofan and Mr. Don Dechard, Mr. James Evans, Mrs. Katherine Lemmerman, Mr. Bruce Rich and Miss Loretta Youngless of the Stofan Studio

The numerous persons without whose willing cooperation many of the various tasks incidental to publication might never have been completed.
